MORGAN FORCED FROM CORPORATIONS

THIRD DAY OF BATTLE AT OJINAGA

PRESIDIO, Tex., Jan. 2.—Terrific fighting marked the third day of the battle of Ojinaga today. Rebels have made several attempts to capture the town by direct assault, but thus far the Federal defenders have repulsed every charge, though they are completely surrounded except on the river side.

The fighting has now been continuous for thirty-six hours, darkness having brought no cessation in the fighting.

Major McNamee, commander of the border patrol, sent the following report of the battle to General Hugh L. Scott, U. S. A.:

"The battle in Ojinaga continued during the night with an increased volume of fire from the Federals in trenches about the town. Several sharp assaults by the rebels were repelled. It is reported that the Federals lost thirty killed and wounded. The rebel casualties are unknown.

"There are now fifty-three wounded Federals in the church at Presidio. Their own surgeons, with the assistance of Mexican people, are caring for them. The Red Cross physicians and nurses are due to arrive this afternoon to take charge.

"It is reported that the Federals are to be paid today. No further desertions to our side are reported. The Federals are making a brave stand but are wasting ammunition, and are completely surrounded, except on the United States line for about four miles."

REBELS ATTACK NUEVO LAREDO TODAY FROM THREE SIDES

LAREDO, Tex., Jan. 2.—Five hundred more Constitutionalist soldiers joined the command of General Gonzales this forenoon and an attack was made on the Federal garrison at Nuevo Laredo from three sides.

Both armies used artillery during the early morning as the rebels took up their positions for the assault. Unless the Federals repel the attack their only escape is by crossing the Rio Grande to this city.

General Gonzales sent a courier early today to the Federals there demanding their surrender. The demand was rejected and the rebel forces moved forward under cover of their artillery.

The Federals rallied sharply and the second day of the battle which had already resulted in death or injury to more than 350 soldiers was on.

The defending Federals were hampered by fires burning in the town. Many had to be withdrawn from the firing line to fight the flames.

During the night hundreds of refugees crossed the Rio Grande into this city. Women and children were given prompt attention by sympathetic Americans, while the men who fled, including a number of Federal troops were taken into custody by American troops.

Count Seymore Is Martyr to Theory

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Edward Stetson Griffing, who became Mayor of New Rochelle yesterday, received in his first batch of official correspondence a telegram from Dr. T. F. Dailey of Elizabethtown, Ky., announcing the death of Count August Schaefelyskу de Mukkadel de Castellane Seymore of New York, Paris, San Francisco and New Rochelle.

The telegram said that the Count died on Wednesday as the result of a self-administered injection of a suspended animation culture.

The theory held by the Count was that a drug obtained from a certain Russian plant would produce a suspension of activity in the human organism to such an extent as to deceive the most practiced eye.

What One Boy's "Want Ad" Did

Not so long ago an ambitious boy decided to earn some money for himself.

He put this ad in the newspaper: "I'm tired fooling away my time after school. I'll earn more money than I ask. Who will offer me a job?"

Not only did this boy get immediate and good paying work, but his ad was reprinted hundreds of times as an example of good advertising.

There is a lesson in this for every boy in Boston. This is the time to decide how you will earn extra money this year.

Tell what you can do as earnestly as the other boy did, and you'll soon be on somebody's payroll.

Write your little ad today and leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, or the

BANKERS QUIT AS DIRECTORS

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The first result of the government campaign against the system of interlocking directorates was shown today when members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. resigned from a large number of corporations, including railroads, banks and industrial concerns.

In connection with the resignations J. P. Morgan gave out the following statement:

> The necessity of attending many board meetings has been so serious a burden upon our time that we have long wished to withdraw from the directorates of many corporations. Most of these directorships we have accepted with reluctance and only because we feel constrained to keep in touch with properties which we had organized or whose securities we have recommended to the public both here and abroad.

NEW PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

> An apparent change in public sentiment in regard to the directorships seems now to warrant us in seeking to resign from some of these connections. Indeed it may be in view of the change in sentiment upon this subject that we shall be in a better position to serve such properties and their security holders if we are not directors.
> We have already resigned from the companies and we expect from time to time to withdraw from other boards upon which we feel there is no special obligation to remain.

Mr. Morgan, in giving out the statement, added that in some cases there was still a member left on certain boards while in other cases all the firm members have retired from the boards.

FIVE MEN RESIGN.

Here are the Morgan men and the directorates from which they have resigned:

J. P. Morgan resigns from New York Central, West Shore, Lake Shore, Michigan Central, New York, Chicago & St. Louis, Cleveland, Chicago, Cincinnati & St. Louis, New York, New Haven & Hartford, Central New England, New York, Westchester & Boston, Harlem River & Portchester, Millbrook Co., New England Navigation Co., New England Steamship Co., Rhode Island Co., Rutland Railway Co., Hartford & Connecticut Western, Ontario & Western Railway, Western Union.

Charles Steele resigns from the Jersey Central Railroad and the United States Steel Corporation.

G. P. Davison resigns from the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, Astor Trust Company, Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Chemical National Bank.

W. H. Porter resigns from the Bankers' Trust Company and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

T. W. Lamont resigns from the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Utah Copper Company, Astor Trust Company and Bankers' Trust Company.

REVEALED BY PUJO.

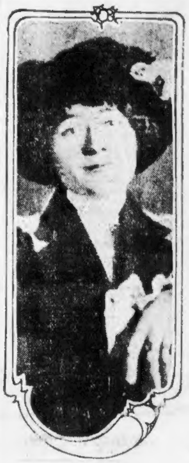
During the investigation of the money trust by the Pujo committee at Washington it developed that the house of Mogan, James Stillman of the National City Bank, George F. Baker and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had a community of interest that prompted the one to offer to the others a share of any venture that was about to be launched. It was during the investigation that the system of interlocking directorates was revealed under which it was charged less than 300 men, by having places on many boards, dominated the financial and industrial situation in America.

CONTROL BILLIONS.

It was shown that the combined influences of J. P. Morgan and John D. Rockefeller controlled 305 banks with a total capital surplus, reserve and deposits of $8,097,631,011. This influence does not appear to have been dropped in any way by the new move because the names of no banks appear in the list of J. P. Morgan's dropped holdings, and the firm is otherwise represented in trust companies from which the partners retired.

JACK GERAGHTY WINS

Mother Appeals: 'Find My Girl!'



ROSE FALLON

Look closely at every girl you see on the street today.

Look at every girl you see—for any one of them may be Rose Fallon, the winsome eighteen-year-old telephone operator who vanished last Tuesday, and for whom the police are desperately searching.

Rose Fallon is just over five feet tall, with a smooth, oval face, bright cheeks, full, sweet lips and appealing blue eyes. She is like many of the girls you will see—though prettier than most. There is one distinguishing mark—a blood-stone ring upon her finger. The ring is engraved with her mother's maiden name—"Mary Otis." The mother prays that that ring may be a talisman to guard the girl from harm, and to bring her safely home.

It is Mrs. Fallon's appeal—"Look closely at every girl you see. One of them may be my little girl—my Rose."

RULING TODAY ON SMITH FOR BALLOT PLACE

After a two-hour argument between opposing counsel, Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Judicial Court took under advisement at 12:50 today the petition of City Councillor Earnest E. Smith for a writ of mandamus to compel the Boston Election Board to put his name on the official mayoralty ballot.

Corporation Counsel Corbett, for the Election Board, called Judge Sheldon's attention to the absolute necessity, as he expressed it, of the Election Board being able to send out word to the various candidates not later than 12 o'clock tonight that they come in and draw for places on the ballot.

Judge Sheldon said that the Corporation Counsel should have the court's decision before that hour and as soon as possible.

Judge Sheldon took the petition under consideration after counsel had agreed to certain facts.

While this hearing was in progress in the equity session of the Supreme Court and politicians, witnesses, counsel and ordinary spectators were jamming Judge Sheldon's room, District Attorney Pelletier in his quarters below had before him all the evidence of alleged nomination frauds for immediate investigation. The District Attorney's investigation grows out of the evidence submitted at yesterday's session of the Ballot Law Commission on charges preferred by Council President Thomas J. Kenny and his rival for the mayoralty, Congressman James M. Curley. The District Attorney will put the evidence before the Grand Jury.

Councillor Smith brought to court 100 witnesses who were to testify that they had placed their signatures individually on nomination papers for Smith, but had never signed nomination papers for any other candidate for Mayor; that they were ready to identify these signatures on Smith's papers as being proper and that, if their names appeared on papers of any other candidates for Mayor they were forgeries.

Corporation Counsel Corbett, for the Election Board, agreed that these men might rightfully testify to that effect. He told the court that an agreed statement of facts had been drawn up by him and Elias Field, counsel for Smith, in which that much was agreed between them.

GERAGHTY TO BE ALDERMAN OF WOBURN

"Jack" Geraghty is an Alderman in Woburn, under a decision of Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Court today. Judge Sheldon refused a petition of W. Fred Davis, on behalf of James P. McGovern, to have McGovern's name counted in among the Aldermen elected instead of Geraghty's. McGovern may reopen the matter by bringing proceedings in his own behalf.

Geraghty was elected alderman, but the question of his length of residence in Woburn was raised as a possible bar to his taking office. The board declared him formally elected and he stands elected unless McGovern carries the case to the courts.

Mrs. Richard C. Fallon of Roslindale, whose eighteen-year-old daughter Rose vanished last Tuesday, today made a piteous appeal to the mothers of New England for help in finding her child.

The girl, her parents believe, was spirited away—forcibly abducted. And today the father is haggard with worry, the mother is in a serious collapse, and Florence Fallon, the missing girl's sister is hysterical with grief.

At their home at No. 3993 Washington street, Roslindale, Mrs. Fallon cried today:

"Any woman with children of her own knows how I am suffering. Every mother sympathizes with me. Cannot these mothers of New England, by their combined watchfulness, help me find my girlie?

"She was just out of childhood—just become a young woman. Her hair was out of long braids only a short time—her skirts just touching her boot tops. She was just a child—just my baby. If she does not come back—it will kill me."

VERMONT GIRL SLAYER CALM IN DEATH SHADOW

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 2.—Everything is in readiness for the execution of Arthur Bosworth, who is to be hanged between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon for the murder of Mae Labelle at Essex Junction, June 7, 1911.

State-wide interest is being taken in the hanging of Bosworth, who will be the last man executed in this way in Vermont.

Sheriff J. H. Kiniry has had the same scaffold used in hanging Mary Rogers and Elroy Kent set up in the west hall of the prison and over a dozen legal witnesses have been bidden to attend the execution.

Bosworth spent the night within a dozen steps of the scaffold. He retired after eating a heavy meal. Guards who were stationed near his cell say that he went to sleep quickly and slept all night. His spiritual adviser, the Rev. A. L. Ford, has been with him constantly.

"I am ready to walk to the scaffold any time you are ready to have me," declared Bosworth to Sheriff Kiniry soon after he awoke this morning. He was in the best of spirits and watched the sun come up for his last time from his cell window.

Special attention has been given to the rope which will be used in hanging Bosworth. When Kent was hanged just a year ago the rope broke.

Physicians and the witnesses who attended the execution said at that time that more care should be taken in testing the hangman's rope. The protest which followed has made Sheriff Kiniry cautious. He declares that the rope will not part when he springs the trap this afternoon.

A Really Tasteless Castor Oil at Last

Good-bye, drugs and pills! The perfect laxative has arrived—Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil—made tasteless by a method which chemists have tried to find for 3,000 years.

This is not a flavored, or disguised castor oil. It is just pure castor oil without taste or odor.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is a better castor oil than the old evil tasting, evil smelling kind. While none of the taste remains, none of the good has been taken out. Kellogg's Tasteless operates quickly and freely, without griping, causes no gas, and does not turn the stomach. Children take it easily and retain it.

The drug stores have all been supplied. You have only to ask for Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil, 25c or 50c size. It is not sold in bulk. The trade mark is a green castor leaf on the label, bearing the Kellogg signature.

HUNT 'FRANK' FOR CLEWS TO FALLON GIRL

which the police have sent broadcast:

Name—Rose A. Fallon.

Age—Eighteen.

Height—Five feet, two inches.

Weight—One hundred and twenty pounds.

Appearance—Light complexion, blue eyes, brown hair.

Clothing—Green sporting coat with belt, blue skirt, small black hat, black button shoes, black stockings.

The girl was a telephone operator at the Haymarket station. She was transferred to the Tremont station, and left home as usual ten days ago to take up this new work. Four days later she was suspended. It is a grim possibility in the case that this suspension and the worry that followed it caused the girl to disappear voluntarily—perhaps to commit suicide.

HAD BUT TEN CENTS.

As far as known she had but ten cents in her pocketbook when last seen, and had not collected the money due her from the telephone company when she was discharged.

A mysterious "Frank," whom friends of the girl recall hearing her speak of often, figures in the case. An effort will be made today to discover his last name and learn if he knows of any plot to lure Miss Fallon away.

A brother of the missing girl stated that the members of the Telephone Operators' Union were to take up the matter of his sister's dismissal from the company at their next meeting, which takes place soon.

Since Miss Fallon was seen at the South Station, her disappearance has been absolute. Her father, who is distracted at her absence, says he knows somebody has taken Rose away or she would have come home.

It was learned also today that the morning she was dismissed from the Haymarket Exchange, where she had been employed for one year, that she went to the rest room of the lower floor and there telephoned to John Bowman, a former schoolmate, living on Washington street, Egleston Square.

Mr. Bowman when seen at his home said he had received a telephone message from Rose Tuesday morning informing him she was through with the telephone company and asking him to meet her at the Forest Hills terminal at 7:30 that evening.

Later he found it would be impossible to be there, so he called her home upon the telephone and asked her folks to deliver that message.

It was learned by neighbors that Rose was at the terminal that evening as early as 6:45 and remained for a while. Several hours later she purchased a postal card at a drug store in that vicinity and mailed it to Miss Susan Stearns, a fellow operator.

The card was postmarked Jamaica Plain and mailed at 9:30. Miss Stearns was asked by telephone at her home in Dorchester if she knew of gentleman friends of Rose and she replied in the negative. She had not heard from her since the postal of Wednesday morning. In the postal Rose stated that she was going away, but that before she went she would inform her friend as to where she was going.

SISTER GRIEF-STRICKEN.

The officials of the telephone company cannot account for her absence and do not think it directly due to her being dropped from the employment roll. Her behavior has been excellent, except in the matter of attendance, they say. They say further that on December 24 she was ordered to report at the Tremont exchange at 9 o'clock in the morning Christmas Day. At noon she had failed to report and her chief operator called her home and talked with her. She explained she was not able to find the Tremont exchange and could give no good excuse, according to the telephone officials, for not calling the chief operator at either exchange. Miss Fallon reported at the Tremont exchange that evening and worked for three hours.

She reported at the Haymarket exchange the next morning and she was suspended. Last Tuesday she was told that she had been dropped. At that time, the officials say, she asked when she might procure her wages due her and she was told to come in the next day. This she failed to do and she has not appeared there since.

Florence Fallon, her younger sister, has become hysterical with grief at the elder sister's absence. The father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Fallon, are distracted, and the mother has appealed to the AMERICAN for help in finding the missing girl.

GRIDIRON HERO SYKES QUITS HIS ACTRESS BRIDE

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Howard Calvin Sykes and his wife have parted. Sykes, once gridiron hero, was forced to leave Yale less than a year ago when he was in his graduating year, following his marriage to Miss Jeannette Crook McIlwaine at Wheeling, W. Va.

Mrs. Sykes has sued for divorce in the West Virginia courts and has adopted the stage for a profession.

As the intimate friend of "Lefty" Flynn, also a football hero at Yale, whose marriage to Miss Rena Leary, a chorus girl, ended his college career and was followed by a separation, Sykes, or "Old Sykesy," as he was known at the university, seems to have followed in Flynn's footsteps.

"Yes; we have separated for good and all," laughed Mrs. Sykes on the New York Roof Garden, where she is billed as "A Society Bud." She continued: "We didn't live long together. The divorce had to come.

"Howard met me at a golf tournament in the Bronx and he became attentive at once. Then I went to several hops given in New Haven by the Yale men.

"During the holidays a year ago Howard came to see me at my home in Wheeling and we were married then. I hadn't the faintest idea that his family objected to his marriage. Why should they? My social position is as good as theirs. I am a granddaughter of General Crook, the famous Indian fighter.

"Does it look as though I had a broken heart? No; I am satisfied, and I'm going to earn my own living and try to forget all about this early romance."

American Catches Vesuvius in Film

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Frederick Burlingham, an American, has arrived here with 2,000 feet of film showing the boiling bowels of Vesuvius' interior, in which he and two Italians descended to a depth of 1,200 feet.

Lower Living Cost

Mighty is the attractive power of genuine bargains, especially in these days of the high cost of living. Announcement in the newspapers by A. Shuman & Co. of extensive mark-downs in their great stock of boys' and little men's suits and overcoats, caused by damage from Summer Street Subway construction, resulted in crowding the boys' and little men's departments with eager buyers. In fact, so great was the throng that, despite the sales force of fifty, the firm was obliged to send out for luncheons for their employees, who cheerfully gave up their luncheon hour that all who called might be waited on promptly.

Despite the enormous sales stocks are so large that many of the great bargains are still available, it is said. Prices have been cut, in many instances, to 50% and even 60% below regular. This, combined with the public confidence in the well-known character of all Shuman goods, explains why this sale is proving a record breaker.

MOCK WEDDING QUERY IN LLOYD PROMISE SUIT

A list of 250 interrogatories today confront Miss Mary I. Sullivan of Nedham, in connection with her suit for $160,000 against John Bross Lloyd, millionaire grandson of the former Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois, for alleged breach of promise. The interrogatories placed on file by Henry D. Lloyd of Newton in the Superior Court, ask:

"Is it a fact that at one time it was proposed that a mock marriage should be held between you and John Bross Lloyd for the purpose of inducing the termination of the guardianship and trusteeship over the said John Bross Lloyd? When, where and by whom was the proposal made? What was said and done thereto by Daniel L. Smith?"

Miss Sullivan is asked to tell the reputation for morality of her aunts, when she met Lloyd and through whom, when and where marriage between them was first discussed, whether she had ever been alone with him, what was discussed and how affection was displayed, what statements were made as to the character of her family and the state of her health and whether she ever learned anything derogatory to Lloyd's character.

MRS. BEDELL ASKS $2,000 FOR HUSBAND NOW

The market price of husbands has doubled with the advent of the new year.

Mrs. Agnes E. Jones Bedell, whose offer to sell her helpmate to Miss Mary Chandler for $1,000 caused a sensation, now wants $2,000 for him.

"I find that I love William more than I ever dreamed I did," said Mrs. Bedell today. "Had Miss Chandler accepted my offer when it was first made I would have let him go at the bargain price I first quoted. I knew that she needed a man to care for her and her child and I guess it was sympathy that led me to set such a low figure. She can't have him now for less than $2,000. As to my two children, money could not buy either of them."

Bedell, at his home in Quincy, said that he realizes that he loves his wife more than ever.

"I wouldn't take a million dollars for her," he declared. "But it looks to me as though she does not love me as much as she pretends she does. She cares more for the money than she does for me. I will willingly sacrifice myself for her if she succeeds in finding a customer for me. I love her children as much as if they were my own and would hate to see either of them sold at any price."

We confess to a mistake. In the past week of very merry suit selling we could have used more broadcloths. The styles were splendid. The suits just flew out in wool poplin and changeable eponge and checks and broadcloths, but we could have used more broadcloths.

The point of this confession is to tell you that we have more broadcloths. Just a few days from their boxes are the snappy styles that have been accepted as the smartest, and they are in that much wanted broadcloth.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success, and I am Successful

While this sale may seem to border on the sensational, it must not be confused with any but the most legitimate means and the best principles of modern merchandising to effect a positive clearance.

BOSTON
384 Washington St.
Cor. Franklin

As announced yesterday, I have abandoned all hope of a penny's profit this season. Ordinary problems of merchandising have no terrors for me, but when I am up against the weatherman, I THROW UP MY HANDS. The last four months of 1913 smashed all Weather Bureau records for high temperature. My six great stores emerge from these backward conditions frightfully overstocked. I am driven to heroic measures.

I Must Turn My Stocks Into CASH Irrespective of Cost

While business in every line has been completely demoralized by the extraordinary weather conditions, no other clothing organization in the country is now forced to take the terrific loss that I am, BECAUSE OF THE UNIQUE CHARACTER OF MY BUSINESS. I am compelled by contract to keep my custom shops busy EVERY WORKING DAY IN THE YEAR. It is only by this method that I am able to retain the services of my high-grade journeymen tailors and to offer always a full season in advance of current styles at the prices of ordinary readymades. Whether the public demand is great or small, the daily output continues. NOW I AM DRIVEN TO HEROIC MEASURES.

In the past, whenever I have faced adverse conditions, my intense price cutting has never failed to crowd my stores. MY REDUCTIONS IN THIS SALE WILL, I BELIEVE, MAKE NEW SELLING HISTORY.

VALUABLE COSTUMES OF DOROTHY MACVANE SEIZED BY ITALIANS

Fresh persecutions of Miss Dorothy Macvane, the Cambridge grand opera singer, by the Italian authorities, are described in a new letter which has just come to this country from Rome from Miss Edith Macvane, the novelist, and sister of the harassed singer.

Her very habits, as an athletic American girl, of taking long walks, are regarded as suspicious.

Though the Italian government, on protest of Ambassador Page, ceased its first surveillance, it took no measures to reinstate Miss Macvane in the good opinion of the populace, which followed her with jeers and with cries of "Spy."

Threats were made to burn the opera house at Taranto if she sang there.

The brave girl sang, however, and temporarily won over even the most hostile of the audience by her art and voice.

FEARED FICKLE MOB.

Seizure of her personal effects, including thousands of dollars' worth of opera costumes, followed and the young prima donna was forced to spend Christmas in her empty room for fear of the fickle mob. The latest letter from Miss Edith Macvane, like its predecessors, is a spirited protest as follows:

"Rome, Dec. 29, 1913.

"The reason of the Italian government's suspicions against my sister was first of all her habits of an athletic American girl. Instead of going on a little promenade on the Esplanade at 5 o'clock, like the Italian ladies, she went in the mornings on long walks along the breezy Mediterranean shore. Ignorant of the importance of the great naval station of Taranto, her habitual walk led her along the secret fortresses and the celebrated hidden harbor for which Taranto is famous.

"On one occasion Dorothy, with a companion, Mme. Yvonne Longlois, had luncheon packed in boxes by the hotel and went out to eat it on the beautiful beach. Unfortunately, the spot they chose for the picnic was directly under the old castle, full of military secrets. The lunch boxes were taken for kodaks and suspicion grew thick.

FOLLOWED BY POLICE.

"Inquiry proved that the mysterious stranger had for brother-in-law a certain French captain of cavalry, Baron de Placy. Immediately Dorothy was placed under strict and annoying surveillance. Two policemen were always at her heels. Her correspondence was tampered with. Angry mobs called her 'spy,' and followed her in the streets, and she was warned not to sing at the theatre or to leave the town under penalty of arrest at the station.

"Here in Rome I immediately appealed to the Ambassador, Mr. Page. In response to the representations which he with great kindness made at once to the government came the complete exoneration of Dorothy. With this, we thought, the trouble had ceased. Instead it seems only to have begun.

"With the ceasing of the surveillance Dorothy was allowed to sing. She had been warned that a hostile demonstration had been prepared. As the government had taken no steps to inform the public that the 'French spy' was no spy at all, their hostility continued, and they even threatened to burn down the Opera House if the 'spy' sang.

A TRIUMPH AT THE OPERA.

"Dorothy, however, refused to be intimidated. She walked upon the stage as Violetta in 'Traviata' to face a grim, hostile audience, and in the end by 'the beauty of her voice and the passion of her acting'—I use the words of the critics next day—she actually succeeded in winning the public over to her side. The evening ended in tumultuous applause and a veritable triumph for the young American prima donna.

"Right here is where the 'fishy' part of the business begins. By the enormous success of his new Violetta the greed of the manager was aroused. Every night following when 'La Maciame' sang the Opera House was packed with the public an hour before the curtain was rung up. Borboni determined thereupon to force her to sing every night—an impossible feat for a grand opera singer. She refused, and announced her intention of leaving him and accepting an offer at one of the large cities of Italy. Thereupon Borboni resolved to reduce her to compliance.

"On Christmas eve Dorothy took a walk with Mme. Longlois. She was much distressed by a visit from a blackmailing journalist, who had shown her an article, full of foul and scandalous assertions, which he threatened to publish all over Italy unless she at once paid him a handsome sum in cash. To this disgraceful episode was added another pursuit by a street mob of the common people of Taranto, to whom the government had not bothered to communicate Dorothy's innocence and who still believed she was guilty. On two previous occasions they had mobbed her in the street.

"On Christmas Eve the crowd was larger and more determined, and the angry mob followed at her heels, shouting, 'Spy! French spy!'

ALL HER BELONGINGS SEIZED.

"In terror of violence, Dorothy and her companion rushed to their hotel and resolved to leave Taranto the next day. At the hotel she found three Sheriffs waiting, who showed her a declaration from Borboni, declaring that three years ago he sued her in a Palermo court for breach of contract. At the very time when she was lying delirious of typhoid, he affirmed, he obtained a decree with heavy damages. In default of payment, he now sent carabinieri to seize her wardrobe and all her possessions.

"In vain Dorothy protested that she could not have been in Palermo, because the port was closed with cholera and she herself had typhoid. She told them she never received any intimation of any such suit or sentence and had had no opportunity to defend herself or to send a legal representative. How was it possible that three years ago she was condemned to large damages without knowing anything about it?

"The police, however, did not argue the point. Is it possible that in their mortification at the failure of the 'spy' charge and the scathing rebukes they received from the Roman press they are not averse to an act of revenge? We make no charges, but present the facts.

TOOK RICH COSTUMES.

"The next day carabinieri, armed always with the 'sentenza,' returned to Dorothy's room. With the aid of her maid and Mme. Longlois they packed up all my sister's belongings, to the amount of many thousands of dollars. Much of it is not even to be replaced by money. All the expensive and rich costumes of five different operas, including two sets of costumes for 'Traviata,' hand-painted dresses, embroidered dresses, velvet mantles, all made in Paris, all the costly paraphernalia of a grand opera singer, all Dorothy's own clothes, hats, dresses, lingerie, furs, jewels—stage jewelry and real diamonds—all these were swept into trunks and the seals of the Italian government were affixed. Then the six trunks were hoisted on the shoulders of sturdy carabinieri and borne away. As Dorothy, for fear of the mob, dared not go out walking, she was forced to spend Christmas in her empty room.

"This was four days ago. Since then correspondence has been uncertain. Evidently there are letters missing. Our anxiety is intense. It is necessary for Dorothy's safety that she leave that city at once, yet how can she leave while her entire possessions, to the value of many thousands, are being withheld from her?

"In hopes that she may escape by paying blackmail, I yesterday wired her all the money we had here in the bank. I can only hope it reached her and that in default of other protection she may buy her way to safety."

School Children Flee Belfast Fire

BELFAST, Me., Jan. 2.—One hundred pupils of the North Primary School were forced to flee from the building shortly after the morning session began today by fire which completely destroyed the building. No one was injured. The loss is estimated at $2,500.

FIVE HURT IN $50,000 FIRE IN SOMERVILLE

Fifty thousand dollars damage was done and four firemen and a Harvard collegian, who was helping with a hose, were injured in a two-alarm fire which swept through a one-story brick and wooden block at Nos. 674-692 Broadway, at Ball square, West Somerville, early today.

The fire started in Allen's lunch room and worked both ways. Lieutenant Charles H. Timson and Hosemen John H. O'Connell and Dennis J. Collins of Hose 2 were carrying a hose line into the lunch room kitchen when the floor gave way, letting them into a cellar full of water.

Down with them went Richard C. Peabody of No. 15 Apsley court, Harvard College, who is a "fire fan" and who dashed to the fire in his auto, jumped out and volunteered to help.

Assistant Chief Ring, who was standing in the doorway, was nearly carried down with the others. The three firemen and the volunteer collegian were rescued from the water and debris in the cellar. Peabody was sent to Somerville Hospital where several cuts were dressed.

A little later Lieutenant George W. Bridges of Chemical 7 collapsed from cold, exhaustion and inhaling smoke and was found unconscious in the middle of Broadway. He was sent home.

The building was occupied by the Palace of Sweets, Allen's lunch, Mrs. Gray's millinery, George E. Rogers' newsstore, a cobbler's shop, Sanford & Orme's creamery, M. O'Keefe's grocery, George N. Blake's drygoods and the Ball Square bowling alley (in basement).

All the stores were burned out except Blake's drygoods, which was saved from flames by a party wall, but suffered from smoke and water.

DON'T TRUST CALOMEL

Thousands Experience Bad After Effects From This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a laxative and liver toner in a combination of vegetable materials mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him, years ago, towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he has been for several years in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. And their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

There is no necessity, when you take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, for following them up with nasty, sickening, griping salts, or castor oil, as you do after taking calomel. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT TODAY IN THE MARKET

Citrous fruits are more plentiful and cheaper this year than for years. California navel oranges are still quite scarce, owing to the orchards suffering from last year's frosts, but they are coming faster than was expected, and the deficit is more than made up by shipments from Florida and the West Indies.

The lemon supply has been largely from the Mediterranean countries up to the present time, but the shipments from California are increasing daily. Lemons have been selling at record prices for nearly a year, but dealers

There has never been a time when grape fruit sold so cheaply as at present. In the market very good pomelos sell at six and seven for a quarter and big Florida russets sell at four for a quarter.

Eggs are much cheaper, new laid having falling four cents during the past week and ten cents during the past fortnight. The jobbers now quote fancy new laid eggs at thirty-eight cents a dozen.

Fish is very scarce and high priced just now, owing to bad weather on the fishing grounds. Smelts are becoming more plentiful, however, and are selling for lower prices.

Florida strawberries are coming into the Northern markets in greater quantities than in previous years at this season, but the demand keeps the price about stationary at seventy-five cents a box.

Ballet Refuses to Dance Barefooted

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The women of the corps de ballet of the National Theatre and Opera at Mannheim have gone on strike at the command of "the ballet union" because the management, it is alleged, attempted to coerce them into dancing barefoot.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or, if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

SHAW DENIES PEACE IS NEAR AT CALUMET

Quincy A. Shaw, president of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company, and James McNaughton, general manager of the company's group of mines in Michigan, today declared that under no consideration would they ever re-employ any striker so long as he remained a member of the Western Federation of Miners.

The two officials conferred at the company offices in Ashburton place.

President Shaw declared there was no possibility of a settlement of the strike in Michigan.

He declared the statement untrue which came from Lansing, Mich., that a representative of the Federal Department of Labor had said the differences between the strikers and the mine management were being harmonized.

GIVES MOYER THE LIE.

Manager McNaughton was asked about the charge against him by President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners. Moyer accused the manager of having a hand in the ejection of the Federation head from the strike zone.

"It's a lie," said Manager McNaughton. "I never saw Moyer in my life, and to the best of my knowledge and belief he never saw me.

"Do I look like a thug or a murderer? Every statement emanating from him has been false. He lies when he says that I had anything to do with the assault alleged to have been made on him."

President Shaw said:

"The statements published in the Eastern papers as coming from the heads of the Western Federation of Miners are untrue in every particular as regards the situation at the mines.

"This is especially true as regards the complaint made by the Federation's attorney, Clarence F. Darrow, in relation to the personnel of the Grand Jury there.

CLEARS JURY STORY.

"Mr. Darrow states there are no strikers on the Grand Jury, giving the impression that this Grand Jury was 'packed' against the strikers, so-called. As a matter of fact, the list of grand jurors was drawn several months before the strike started."

Manager McNaughton said the company had 4,260 men at work at the Calumet & Hecla mine and that there were 6,300 men at work on the company's entire group of mines.

"This means that there are only 280 men participating in the so-called strike at the Calumet & Hecla today," he said, "and that seventy-six per cent. of our employes are at work in our entire group of mines."

Whitman 'Couldn't Buy Hoboken Home'

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—District-Attorney Whitman was asked today about a report that he had purchased a home in Newport. "Not me," he said; "I couldn't buy a home in Hoboken. Mrs. Whitman and I are going to Newport today to spend the week-end, and perhaps that gave origin to the report."

VATICAN MAY CARE FOR WILLS OF CARDINALS

ROME, Jan. 2.—To avoid complications such as have followed the death of Cardinal Rampolla, Pope Pius X. today sent circular letters to all the cardinals recommending that their wills be deposited in the Vatican.

Baroness Rampolla-Perrano, sister of the late Cardinal, and her daughter-in-law, Princess Altieri, have agreed to the removal of the seals on his apartment today or tomorrow.

A joint inventory of the contents of the apartment will then be made and officials of the Vatican probably will take part.

Signor Zeppala, lawyer for the Cardinal's sister, declares he will shortly reveal the sources of the malicious rumors circulated after the death of the prelate. He asserted that a hubbub had been raised about nothing. He insisted that there was no mystery about the Cardinal's death nor his will.

SUSPECT VALET.

It is announced in Milan that a large number of important documents were stolen from the desk of Cardinal Rampolla, but were returned when a tempting reward was offered. Among those suspected is the prelate's valet.

The papers included secret memoirs and letters of immense value, as among them are confidential documents regarding the Vatican's propaganda in Italy and abroad aiming at the prevention of the renewal of the Triple Alliance.

The prevailing opinion that Cardinal Rampolla would have been elected Pope at the last conclave were it not for the veto of the Emperor of Austria is entirely mistaken and unfounded.

The late Cardinal Mathieu, who was present at the conclave and afterward wrote a book in which he described it, says that when the first ballot was taken on August 1, 1903, Cardinal Rampolla had 24 votes out of 62. In the afternoon of the same day Cardinal Rampolla's votes increased to 29. On the following day Cardinal Puzyna interposed the veto against the election of Cardinal Rampolla, who in the succeeding ballot had 30 votes. Cardinal Rampolla could not have been elected with less than 42 votes, as he required two-thirds of the votes of all the electors present.

MAJORITY OPPOSED.

Now it is well known that there were only twenty-four cardinals in the Sacred College who supported Cardinal Rampolla. These cardinals were joined by five more after the first ballot and still by another cardinal after the veto had been pronounced. The remaining thirty-two cardinals opposed from the very beginning of the conclave the election of Cardinal Rampolla and they would not have voted in his favor even if his election had not been vetoed. The veto might have influenced the conclave by producing a reaction in favor of Cardinal Rampolla, but the fact that this did not happen proves that not even twelve out of the remaining thirty cardinals changed their opinion and they would not have voted for Cardinal Rampolla in any case.

CATHOLICS IN CHURCH WAR ON THE TANGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Led by the diocesan authorities, the clergy of the Roman Catholic Church in this city have inaugurated a fight against the tango and other popular forms of modern dancing.

This became evident when it was announced yesterday that the 600 invitations issued for the entertainment and cotillon of the Junior Auxiliary of the Catholic Institution for the Blind had been recalled and that the affair had been abandoned. The entertainment, which was to have consisted of tableaux and dancing, was scheduled to take place next Monday evening at Delmonico's.

Mrs. Jacob L. Phillips, who had been actively engaged in completing the arrangements for the dance, made the positive statement that the cancellation was made in obedience to the expressed opinions of Cardinal Farley and various bishops throughout the country who have declared their diapproval of any entertainment given by Catholics in which the tango, the one-step glide, or maxixe are indulged in. According to Mrs. Phillips, the women of the auxiliary had discussed the subject and had come to the conclusion that the wisest course would be to uphold Cardinal Farley and the project was abandoned by a unanimous vote.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas G. Carroll, secretary to Cardinal Farley, explained that while the church had not officially placed a ban upon dancing Cardinal Farley deplored the trend of the present vogue as immodest and had determined to do all in his power to discourage it.

"Having taken this position," said Dr. Carroll, "his Eminence felt that it would be most inconsistent on his part to permit such a form of entertainment to be given by any organization connected with diocesan activities for the purpose of raising funds for the support and maintenance of diocesan charities or institutions.

TOO MANY CHILDREN

are pale and frail—backward in studies—with pinched faces and poor blood—their minds and bodies are actually starved because their regular food does not nourish.

Such children need Scott's Emulsion above everything else; it contains nature's rarest life-giving fats; it is essentially food value—blood-food and bone-food, free from wine, alcohol or harmful drug.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat, which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

WAIT FOR NEW HAVEN TO SHOW LATEST PLANS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—"There has been no definite plan suggested to either the attorney general or myself concerning the dissolution of the New York, New Haven & Hartford system.

This statement was made today by Assistant-Attorney-General Gregory, who is conducting the government's case against the railroad.

"We evidently woud approve any plan which would bring about a segregation of the New Haven's subsidiary lines and restore competitive conditions in New England," added Mr. Gregory. "We most certainly would approve any proposition to transfer the holding company to voluntary trustees with the ultimate sale of stock to New Haven stockholders, if this plan were satisfactory to us.

"But you can readily understand that unless a plan is suggested setting forth all of its ramifications, this department could not give its approval ,and then only after such a plan had been investigated thoroughly.

"As I said, there has been no definite plan presented. I cannot ,therefore, tell what the New Haven has offered to do towards getting rid of its steamship and trolley lines."

Mr. Gregory expects Chairman Elliott of the New Haven will come here tomorrow, and indicated that the plan of the New Haven directors then might be presented.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

If You Did Not See the First Instalment Read This Part

MARY O'NEILL begins her story by telling of how her father, born in Ellan, the son of peasants, had gone to America, become rich, and had then returned to his birthplace, where he married the daughter of Captain O'Neill, of the O'Neills, and had changed his name from Daniel Neale to Daniel O'Neill. She tells of her own birth and of her father's disappointment for if a boy had been born he would have been Lord Raa, by right of his mother. She begins to tell of Father Dan, the priest, and of her mother.

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

FIRST PART
MY GIRLHOOD

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

My mother called me Mally veen (Mary dear), and out of love of her only child she must have weaned me late, for I have vague memories of her soft white breasts filled with milk. I slept in a little wickerwork cot placed near her bed, so that she could reach me if I uncovered myself in the night. She used to say I was like a bird, having something birdlike in my small dark head and the way I held it up. Certainly I remember myself as a swift little thing, always darting to and fro on tiptoe, and chirping about our chill and rather cheerless house.

If I was like a bird my mother was like a flower. Her head, which was small and fair, and her face, which was nearly always tinged with color, drooped forward from her delicate body like a rose from its stalk. She was generally dressed in black, I remember, but she wore a white lace collar as well as a coif such as we see in old pictures, and when I call her back to my mind, with her large liquid eyes and her sweet soft mouth, I think it cannot be my affection alone, or the magic of my childish memory, which makes me think, after all these years and all the countries I have travelled in, and all the women I have seen, that my darling mother, though so little known and so little loved, was the most beautiful woman in the world.

Even yet I cannot but wonder that other people, my father especially, did not see her with my eyes. I think he was fond of her after his own fashion, but there was a kind of involuntary contempt in his affection, which could not conceal itself from my quick little eyes. She was visibly afraid of him, and was always nervous and timid when he came into our room with his customary salutation.

"How now, Isabel? And how's this child of yours?"

From my earliest childhood I noticed that he always spoke of me as if I had been my mother's child, not his, and perhaps this affected my feeling for him from the first.

I was in terror of his loud voice and rough manner, the big bearded man with the iron grey head and the smell of the fresh air about his thick serge clothes. It was almost as if I had conceived this fear before my birth, and had brought it out of the tremulous silence of my mother's womb.

My earliest recollections are of his muffled shout from the room below, "Keep your child quiet, will you?" when I was disturbing him over his papers by leaping and skipping about the floor. If he came upstairs when I was in bed I would dive under the bedclothes, as a duck dives under water, and only come to the surface when he was gone. I am sure I never kissed my father or climbed on to his knee, and that during his short visits to our room I used to hold my breath and hide my head behind my mother's gown.

A MOTHER'S EFFORTS

I think my mother must have suffered both from my fear of my father and from my father's indifference to me, for she made many efforts to reconcile him to my existence. Some of her innocent schemes, as I recall them now, seem very sweet but very pitiful. She took pride, for instance, in my hair, which was jet black even when I was a child, and she used to part it in the middle and brush it smooth over my forehead in the manner of the Madonna, and one day, when my father was with us, she drew me forward and said:

"Don't you think our Mary is going to be very pretty? A little like the pictures of Our Lady, perhaps—don't you think so, Daniel?"

Whereupon my father laughed rather derisively and answered:

"Pretty, is she? Like the Virgin, eh? Well, well!"

I was always fond of music, and my mother used to teach me to sing to a little upright piano which she was allowed to keep in her room, and on another day she said:

"Do you know our Mary has such a beautiful voice, dear? So sweet and pure that when I close my eyes I could almost think it is an angel singing."

Whereupon my father laughed as before, and answered:

"A voice, has she? Like an angel's, is it? What next, I wonder?"

My mother made most of my clothes. There was no need for her to do so, but in the absence of household duties I suppose it stimulated the tenderness which all mothers feel in covering the little limbs they love, and one day, having made a velvet frock for me, from a design in an old pattern book of colored prints, which left the legs and neck and arms very bare, she said:

"Isn't our Mary a little lady? But she will always look like a lady, whatever she is dressed in."

And then my father laughed still more contemptuously and replied:

"Her grandmother weeded turnips in the fields, though—ninepence a day dry days, and sixpence all weathers."

My mother was deeply religious, never allowing a day to pass without kneeling on her prayer-stool before the image of the Virgin, and one day I heard her tell my father that when I was a little mite, scarcely able to speak, she found me kneeling in my cot with my doll perched up before me, moving my lips as if saying my prayers and looking up at the ceiling with a rapt expression.

"But she has always had such big, religious eyes, and I shouldn't wonder if she becomes a nun some day!"

"A nun, eh? Maybe so. But I take no stock in the nun business anyway," said my father.

Whereupon my mother's lips moved as if she were saying "No, dearest," but her dear, sweet pride was crushed and she could go no farther.

Fourth Chapter

THERE was a whole colony on the ground floor of our house who, like my father, could not reconcile themselves to my existence, and the head of them was Aunt Bridget.

She had been married, soon after the marriage of my mother, to one Colonel MacLeod, a middle-aged officer on half-pay, a widower, a Belfast Irishman, and a tavern companion of my maternal grandfather. But the Colonel had died within a year, leaving Aunt Bridget with one child of her own, a girl, as well as a daughter of his wife by the former marriage. As this happened about the time of my birth, when it became obvious that my mother was to be an invalid, my father invited Aunt Bridget to come to his house as housekeeper, and she came, and brought her children with her.

Her rule from the outset had been as hard as might have been expected from one who prided herself on her self-command—a quality that covered everybody, including my mother and me, and was only subject to softening in favor of her own offspring.

Aunt Bridget's own daughter, a year older than myself, was a fair child with light gray eyes, round cheeks of the color of ripe apples, and long yellow hair that was carefully combed and curled. Her name was Betsy, which was extended by her mother to Betsy Beauty. She was usually dressed in a muslin frock with a sash of light blue ribbon, and being understood to be delicate was constantly indulged and nearly always eating, and giving herself generally the airs of the daughter of the house.

Aunt Bridget's stepdaughter, ten years older, was a gaunt, ungainly girl with red hair and irregular features. Her name was Nessy, and, having an instinctive sense of her dependent position, she was very humble and subservient and, as Tommy the Mate used to say, "as smooth as an old threepenny bit" to the ruling powers, which always meant my aunt, but spiteful, insolent, and acrid to anybody who was outside my aunt's favor, which usually meant me.

Between my cousin and myself there were constant feuds, in which Nessy MacLeod never failed to take the side of Betsy Beauty, while my poor mother became a target for the shafts of Aunt Bridget, who said I was a wilful, wicked, underhand little vixen, and no wonder, seeing how disgracefully I was indulged, and how shockingly I was being brought up.

A FOOLISH CLIMAX

These skirmishes went on for a considerable time without consequences, but they came at last to a foolish climax which led to serious results.

Even my mother's life had its gleams of sunshine, and flowers were a constant joy to her. Old Tommy, the gardener, was aware of this, and every morning sent up a bunch of them, freshly cut and wet with the dew. But one day in the Spring he could not do so, being out in the dubs of the Curragh, cutting peat for the fires. Therefore I undertook to supply the deficiency, having already with the large solemnity of six, begun to consider it my duty to take charge of my mother.

"Never mind, mammy, I'll setch some slowers sor wou," I said (every f being an s in those days), and armed with a pair of scissors I skipped down to the garden.

I had chosen a bed of annuals because they were bright and fragrant, and was beginning to cut some "gilvers" when Nessy MacLeod, who had been watching from a window, came bouncing down on me.

"Mary O'Neill, how dare you?" cried Nessy. "You wilful, wicked, underhand little vixen, what will your Aunt Bridget say? Don't you know this is Betsy Beauty's bed, and nobody else is to touch it?"

I began to excuse myself on the ground of my mother an[illegible] Tommy the Mate, but Nessy would [illegible]ar no such explanation.

"Your mamma has n[illegible] to do with it. You know qui[illegible] that your Aunt Bridget man[illegible]ery-thing in this house, and nothing can be done without her."

Small as I was that was too much for me. Somewhere in my little heart there had long been a secret pang of mortified pride—how born I do not know—at seeing Aunt Bridget take the place of my mother, and now, choking with vexation but without saying a word, I swept off the heads of all the flowers in the bed, and with my arms full of them—ten times more than I wanted—I sailed back to my mother's room.

TAKEN FROM MOTHER

Inside two minutes there was a fearful tumult. I thought I was doomed to punishment when I heard the big bunch of keys, which Aunt Bridget kept suspended from her waist, come jingling up the stairs, but it was my poor mother who paid the penalty.

"Isabel," cried Aunt Bridget, "I hope you are satisfied with your child at last."

"What has Mary been doing now, dear?" said my mother.

"Don't ask me what she has been doing. You know quite well, or if you don't you ought to."

My mother glanced at the flowers and she seemed to understand what had happened, for her face fell and she said submissively:

"Mary has done wrong but I am sure she is sorry and will never do it again."

"Sorry, indeed!" cried my aunt. "Not she sorry. And she'll do it again at the very next opportunity. The vixen! The little wilful, underhand vixen! But what wonder if children go wrong when their own mothers neglect to correct them!"

"I daresay you are quite right, dear Bridget—you are always right," said my mother in a low, grave voice. "But then I'm not very well, and Mary is all I have, you know."

My mother was in tears by this time, but Aunt Bridget was not content with her triumph. Sweeping downstairs she carried her complaint to my father, who ordered that I was to be taken out of my mother's charge on the ground that she was incapable of attending to my upbringing—a task which, being assigned to my Aunt Bridget, provided that I should henceforward live on the ground floor and eat oaten cake and barley bonnag and sleep alone in the cold room over the hall, while Betsy Beauty ate wheaten bread and apple tart and slept with her mother in the room over the kitchen, in which they always kept a fire.

Fifth Chapter.

THE altered arrangements were a cause of grief to my mother but I am bound to confess that for me they had certain compensations. One [illegible] them was the greater ease with which I could slip out to Tommy the Mate, who had been a sailor before he was a gardener, and was still a fine old salt, with grizzled beard and shaggy eyebrows, and a merry twinkle in what he called his "starboard" eye.

I think Tommy was one of the few about my father's house who were really fond of me, but perhaps that was mainly because he loathed Aunt Bridget. He used to call her the Big Woman, meaning that she was master and mistress of everything and everybody about the place. When he was told of any special piece of her tyranny to servant or farmhand he used to say: "Aw, well, she'll die for all;" and when he heard how she had separated me from my mother, who had nothing else to love or live for he spat sideways out of his mouth and said:

"Our Big Woman is a wicked devil, I'm thinking, and I would trust (shouldn't wonder) but she'll burn in hell."

What definite idea I attached to this denunciation I do not now recall, but I remember that it impressed me deeply, and that many a night afterwards, during the miserable half-hours before I fell asleep with my head under the clothes in the cold bedroom over the hall to me) the bad fairies came for bad which (as Nessy MacLeod had told children, I repeated the strange words again and again.

Another compensation was the greater opportunity I had for cultivating an acquaintance which I had recently made with the doctor's son, when he came with his father on visits to my mother. As soon as the hoofs of the horse were heard on the gravel, and before the bell could be rung, I used to dart away on tiptoe, fly through the porch, climb into the gig and help the boy to hold the reins while his father was upstairs.

This led to what I thought a great discovery. It was about my mother. I had always known my mother was sick, but now I got a "skute" (as old Tommy used to say) into the cause of her illness. It was a matter of milk. The doctor's boy had heard his father saying so. If my mother could only have milk morning, noon and night, every day and all day, "there wouldn't be nothing the matter with her."

A QUARREL.

This, too, impressed me deeply, and the form it took in my mind was that "mammy wasn't sed enough," a conclusion that gained colour from the fact that I was Betsy Beauty perched up in a high chair in the dining room twice or thrice a day, drinking nice warm milk fresh from the cow. We had three cows, I remembered, and to correct the mischief of my mother's illness, I determined that henceforth she should not have merely more of our milk—she should have all of it.

Losing no time in carrying my intentions into effect, I crept into the dairy as soon as the dairymaid had brought in the afternoon's milking. There it was, still frothing and bubbling in three great bowls, and taking up the first of them in my little thin arms—goodness knows how—I made straight for my mother's room.

But hardly had I climbed half-way up the stairs, puffing and panting under my burden, when I met Nessy MacLeod coming down, and she fell on me with her usual reproaches.

"Mary O'Neill, you wilful, underhand little vixen, whatever are you doing with the milk?"

Being in no mood for explanations I tried to push past, but Nessy prevented me.

"No, indeed, you shan't go a step further. What will your Aunt Bridget say? Take the milk back, miss, this very minute."

Nessy's loud protest brought Betsy Beauty out of the dining room, and in a moment, my cousin, looking more than ever like a painted doll in her white muslin dress with a large blue bow in her yellow hair, had run upstairs to assist her step-sister.

I was now between the two, the one above and the other below, and they laid hold of my bowl to take it from me. They tugged and I resisted and there was a struggle in which the milk was in danger of being spilled.

"She's a stubborn little thing and she ought to be whipped," cried Nessy.

"She's stealing my milk, and I'll tell mamma," said Betsy.

"Tell her then," I cried, and in a burst of anger at finding myself unable to recover control of my bowl I swept it around and flung the contents over my cousin's head, thereby drenching her with the frothing milk and making the staircase to run like a river of whitewash.

AUNT BRIDGET'S ANGER.

Of course there was a fearful clamour. Betsy Beauty shrieked and Nessy bellowed, whereupon Aunt Bridget came racing from her parlour, while my mother, white and trembling, halted to to door of her room.

"Mally, Mally, what have you done?" cried my mother, but Aunt Bridget found no need of questions. After running upstairs to her dripping daughter, wiping her down with a handkerchief, calling her "my poor darling," and saying, "Didn't I tell you to have nothing more to do with that little vixen?" she fell on my mother with bitter upbraidings.

"Isabel, I hope you see now what your minx of a child is—the spiteful fury!"

By this time I had dropped my empty bowl on the stairs and taken refuge behind my mother's gown, but I heard her timid voice trying to excuse me and saying something about my cousin and a childish quarrel.

"Childish quarrel, indeed!" cried my Aunt; "there's nothing childish about that little imp, nothing. And what's more, I shall be obliged to you, Isabel, if you will never again have the assurance to speak of my Betsy Beauty in the same breath with a child of yours."

That was more than I could bear. My little heart was afire at the humiliation put upon my mother. So stepping out to the head of the stairs, I shouted down in my shrillest treble:

"Your Betsy Beauty is a wicked devil, and I wouldn't trust but she'll burn in hell!"

Never, to the last hour of my life, shall I forget the effect of that pronouncement. One moment Aunt Bridget stood speechless in the middle of the stairs, as if all breath had been broken out of her. Then, ghastly white and without a word, she came flying up at me, and, before I could recover my usual refuge, she caught me slapped me on the cheek and boxed both my ears.

I do not remember if I cried, but I know my mother did, and that in the midst of the general tumult my father came out of his room and demanded in a loud voice, which seemed to shake the whole house, to be told what was going on.

Aunt Bridget told him, with various embellishments, which my mother did not attempt to correct, and then, knowing she was in the wrong, she began to wipe her eyes with her wet handkerchief, and to say she could not live any longer where a child was encouraged to insult her.

"I have to leave this house—I have to leave it tomorrow," she said.

You don't have to do no such thing," cried my father. "But I'm just crazy to see if a man can't be captain in his own claim. These children must go to school. They must all go—the darned lot of 'em."

Sixth Chapter

BEFORE I speak of what happened at school, I must say how and when I first became known to the doctor's boy.

It was during the Christmastide. On Christmas Eve I awoke in the dead of night with the sense of awakening in another world. The church bells were ringing, and there was singing outside of our house, under the window of my mother's room. After listening for a little while I made my voice as soft as I could and said:

"Mamma, what is it?"

"Hush, dear! It is the Waits. Lie still and listen," said my mother.

I lay as long as my patience would permit, and then creeping over to the window I saw a circle of men and women, with lanterns, and the frosty air smoking about their red faces. After a while they stopped singing, and then the chain of our front door rattled, and I heard my father's loud voice asking the singers into the house.

They came in, and when I was back in bed, I heard them talking and then laughing in the room below, with Aunt Bridget louder than all the rest, and when I asked what she was doing my mother told me she was serving out bunloaf and sherry wine.

I fell asleep before the incident was over, but as soon as I awoke in the morning I conceived the idea of singing the Waits myself. Being an artful little thing I knew that my plan would be opposed, so I said nothing about it, but I got my mother to play and sing the carol I had heard overnight, until my quick ear had mastered both tune and words, and when darkness fell on Christmas night I proceeded to carry out my intention.

In the heat of my impatience I forgot to put on cloak or hat, and stealing out of the house I found myself in the carriage drive with nothing on but a pair of thin slippers and the velvet frock that left my neck and arms so bare. It was snowing, and the snowflakes were whirling round me and making me dizzy, for in the light from my mother's window they seemed to come up from the ground as down from the sky.

When I got out of the light of the window, it was very dark, and I could only see that the chestnuts in the drive seemed to have white blankets on them which looked as if they had been hung out to dry. It was a long time before I got to the gate, and then I had begun to be nervous and to have half a mind to turn back. But the thought of the bunloaf and the sherry-wine buoyed me up, and presently I found myself on the high road, crossing a bridge and turning down a lane that led to the sea, whose moaning a mile away was the only sound I could hear.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

"On Christmas Eve I awoke in the dead of night. The church bells were ringing and there was singing outside of our house."

DENOUNCES AGITATORS AT CALUMET

In his sermon at Houghton, Michigan, Sunday, December 28, at Trinity Church, Episcopal, Rev. Wm. Reid Cross said:

"It is perfectly evident to all at this stage of the present controversy that drastic remedies are necessary. The men who are making it their business to foment class hatred, who are deliberately and of set purpose poisoning the minds of one class of society against another must be got rid of. They are not only undesirable citizens, they are not citizens at all. They are men without a country; they are outlaws and brigands and must be eliminated from the situation. They can no more be tolerated than we could tolerate having our woods infested with robbers or wild beasts.

ON SIDE OF WEAK.

"I have been very slow in reaching this conclusion. I think I am temperamentally on the side of workers who are struggling to improve their condition, and I feel profoundly that the business of a clergyman is to be on the side of the weak against the strong, and I have tried to see that this struggle between the mining companies and the strikers is a part of the age-long struggle of the race to better its condition.

"But it must be perfectly evident to everybody at this time that this is not a strike at all; that it is rather an assault on civilized society.

"It is sedition pure and simple.

"If there was any doubt in any man's mind at all about that it was made clear on Christmas, when one of these men tried to make capital for his cause out of the dreadful catastrophe at Calumet. I do not suppose anybody thinks it was anything but an accident. I cannot believe that any human being could be diabolical enough to plan and carry out such a project. But there was one man who was devilish enough to think of the possibility of its being done by an enemy, and did not hesitate to publish his suspicions broadcast, knowing that it would awaken the fiercest passions in the breasts of his followers.

"For a man lightly and airily, without an investigation, without a scintilla of proof, without waiting to know whether there was any proof or not to put that thought into the minds of these fathers and mothers, was the work of a fiend. It proves that there was one man at least in the community who was capable of thinking it and who therefore was capable of doing it.

NO TRUCE WITH CRIME.

"There can be no reconciliation of factions while these propagandists of treason and crime are permitted to continue their dastardly work. But when they are gotten rid of remember that these others are our people, that they have been much more sinned against than sinning, and that they can be won back to reason by sympathy and kindness and love."

NEWS OF SOCIETY

GAY FIRST ASSEMBLY OF WINTER TONIGHT

MRS. GORHAM BROOKS.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Mrs. Gorham Brooks, who before her marriage last Summer was the belle and beauty, Rosamond Dixey, is making the most of her first season as a full-fledged matron and is doing more than the usual amount of entertaining usually done by a bride.

I saw Mrs. Brooks at the opera the other evening, when she was one of the most beautiful women in the foyer. She wore a gown of deepest old rose satin, which was vastly becoming to her handsome dark coloring and, as she promenaded with her husband, every eye followed them admiringly. Mrs. Brooks is to give a delightful series of entertainments at her Beacon street home early this New Year.

* * *

Tonight will be the night of nights for society, when the very cream of that creamy organization will gather at the Copley-Plaza for the first assembly of the Winter. The smart patronesses for this affair include Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Rudolph L. Agassiz, Miss Ames, Mrs. Henry D. Burnham, Mrs. Stephen V. R. Crosby, Mrs. William C. Endicott, Jr., Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. J. Grafton Minot, Mrs. E. Preble Motley, Mrs. Francis Peabody, Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, Mrs. Charles S. Sargent, Mrs. Philip S. Sears, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr., Mrs. Frederick Winthrop and Mrs. Roger Wolcott.

* * *

Mrs. Andrew W. Lawrie, who, with Mr. Lawrie, has been spending part of the holidays at the Hotel Wolcott, New York, gave a luncheon there on Tuesday. Her guests included Mrs. Clement Lawrence Smith, Miss Elisabeth Ely and Miss Sweet.

* * *

The first of the January teas for members and friends of the Business Women's Club will be held with music Sunday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 p. m. Miss Rosetta Key, soprano, is the soloist. Friday evening from 8 to 11 p. m. Mr. Pickwick, as a guest of the club, will receive his friends at the clubhouse. All members who choose to add to the festivity of the occasion by wearing fancy dress are urged to appear in the guise of Dickens' characters.

Dog Bites Two Boys.

BROCKTON, Jan. 2.—George Lucier, seven, son of Napoleon Lucier of No. 347 North Montello street, and Henry Junior, six, of North Main street, were bitten by a dog in young Lucier's yard, but not seriously injured.

Sold New Haven in Fear of Morgan

The Boston News Bureau says today:

Not a day passes which does not add its contribution to the tales of wrecked or shrunken fortunes as the result of the collapse in New England's railroad securities. Occasionally one hears of a more fortunate individual who "just escaped" by selling out before the crash. We know of one large institution in New York—a prominent fire insurance company—which liquidated 6,000 shares of New Haven on a scale up from 202 to 215, the president of the institution, to use his own words, "fearing the results from the Morgan methods of financing."

Election Rouses Protest in Lynn

After being deadlocked for three days, the Municipal Council of Lynn has elected James Bennett, a General Electric Company foreman, as a member of the local board of assessors. This action has aroused the citizens of the city because the election of Bennett practically gives to the Electric company complete control of the city offices.

Paid High Price for Squantum Chicks

The Squantum chicken is not to be molested lightly. "Joe" Coleman was fined $15 in Quincy District Court today after Police Chief Burrill had testified that "Joe" was caught red-handed with chickens owned by Alfred Dalquist of Squantum. The chief said that "Joe's" method was simply to grab a chicken or two, wring their necks, chuck them into a valise and depart.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 2.—Dr. J. Francis de Silva, aged thirty-eight, a well-known physician and a member of the University of Pennsylvania football team several years ago, died here last night.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Jeb Thornely, an aviator, escaped unhurt at Eastbourne, when his machine fell from an altitude of 2,000 feet and crashed into a dike.

CLEARING HOUSE IS FOR RESERVE BANK IN HUB

The Boston Clearing House, at a meeting at No. 44 State street today, resolved:

"That the association believes it advisable that New England be made a Federal Reserve District, with a Federal Reserve Bank located in Boston."

President Thomas Beal of the Clearing House, William A. Gaston and Alfred L. Ripley were named to represent the Clearing House at hearings in Boston January 9 and 10 on the question of establishing a regional bank here. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will preside. The Clearing House's action is in line with the movement originated by the AMERICAN for a regional reserve bank in Boston.

The Chamber of Commerce investigating committee also went on record today as favoring a regional bank for Boston. It urges a public hearing next month at which bankers and others interested may appear. Representatives will be urged to come from the leading New England cities.

Tango Doomed in English Society

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The tango is now doomed to quick oblivion in English society. Following the Queen's lead, most of the leading hostesses, including the Duchess of Norfolk, the Ladies Coventry, Ladland, Barrett, DeRamsay, Byron, Templeton, Wilkinson, Lacon and Stuart have publicly and strongly condemned the dance.

Long Missing Girl Found with Gypsies

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 2.—The nation-wide search for Lynka Thomas, aged twelve, who disappeared from her home in Sacramento, Cal., eighteen months ago, ended today when the girl was rescued from a gypsy camp near here. Her kidnapers were arrested.

M'GOORTY'S WIN GIVES HIM NEW RING PRESTIGE

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE M'GOORTY'S quick win over Dave Smith in their bout in Sydney, Australia, has boosted the Oshkosh fighter's stock several points in the pugilistic market. We were about to nominate McGoorty as vice-president of the "Down and Out Club" when he up and landed a dream punch on Mr. Smith's glass jaw.

McGoorty was one of the chief candidates for the middleweight championship until he engaged in that ten-round loaf with Mike Gibbons in New York a year ago last December. Eddie's miserable showing against Gibbons made it impossible for him to secure profitable engagements in Gotham. He was afterwards barred in Wisconsin for refusing to box after signing a contract for a ring whirl.

There was, therefore, nothing left for McGoorty to do but to seek new fields of labor. He received a good offer to show in the Antipodes and immediately accepted it.

THE Western youth will have a hard time keeping busy in the land of the Southern cross now that he has defeated Smith. He will have to fight heavyweights or else remain idle. Of course there is not any law against the Oshkosh man meeting second and third raters but Eddie is wise enough to realize that the financial returns from such contests would not be very great.

THERE is a question whether McGoorty would be able to make the middleweight limit of 158 pounds. He has been fighting at 165 pounds or over during the past year and seems to experience trouble in taking off weight. If Eddie cannot make the middleweight limit he will have to be content with exchanging blows with the light heavyweights. In the meantime George Chip will continue to declare that he is the best little middleweight in our midst.

"YOUNG" JASPER, the North End welterweight, will return from New York Saturday. Jasper is planning a busy campaign within the hemp ropes and is anxious to prove he is the best welterweight boxer in New England. The North End boy will meet Terry Martin of Philadelphia in a twelve-round whirl before the Lakeside A. C. of Webster next Wednesday night. Martin is a veteran of the ring and is not a bit bashful in stating that he will give the rugged Jasper a boxing lesson.

MICKEY BROWN, the clever little Malden boxer, is ready to show in the ring again. Brown is the bantamweight champion of New England and says he is ready to defend his title against all comers. The Malden glove wielder would like to get another bout with Al Shubert of New Bedford. These men met several months ago at the Atlas A. A. and the "go" was declared a draw after ten rounds of spirited boxing.

May Shift Brockton Club to Lewiston

Lewiston, Me., will replace Brockton in the New England League circuit next season if the present plans of Owners Joe Burns and Mike McDonough go through. The latter thinks Lewiston people will take kindly to league baseball. He points out the success of Duffy in Portland and that is why Burns is seriously considering the new move.

Chicago Cubs After Pitcher Robinson

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Rumor of a trade by which Rube Robinson, recently acquired by St. Louis from Pitsburgh, might become a Cub, has broken on the baseball Rialto because Manager Miller Huggins of the Cards, and President Murphy of the Cubs, confabbed behind closed doors. Murphy expresed a desire to get Robinson immediately after the Pittsburgh-St. Louis swap, but would not say what he would offer.

Syracuse Rink Is After the Pilgrims

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Jack Norfolk, hockey manager of the Syracuse Arena, has left for Toronto, where he will attend a meeting of the directors of the O. H. A. Norfolk is encountering considerable trouble in booking games for this city and his visit to Canada is mainly to secure attractions. He is at present trying to induce the Pilgrims of Boston to come here next week. The Syracuse team also seeks dates in Boston.

Hail Blake as New English Champion

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Bandsman Blake, the champion English middleweight pugilist, who defeated "Dixie Kid," the American negro boxer, on points in a twenty-round bout, is being hailed here as the man most likely to regain England's lost heavyweight honors from the Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, who recently knocked out Bombardier Wells, who held the title, in one minute and thirteen seconds.

Gloucester Back on Boxing Map

The boxing lid will soon be lifted in Gloucester. The new club which is planning to stage ring contests is reported to have matched Battling Sylvia and "Young" Brown of Belgium. It will have a hard time drawing the "fans" to its clubhouse if it does not put on better shows than this. Brown was knocked out in a punch by Fred Yelle while Sylvia was beaten recently by Eddie Flynn.

The Lenox A. C., of which Eddie Mack was matchmaker, promoted some slashing bouts last year and they were well attended the latter part of the season.

CHICOPEE "WHITE HOPE" GAME TO THE END BUT PROVES NO MATCH FOR "GUNBOAT" SMITH

PELKY IS GAME BUT HE PROVES EASY FOR SMITH

Gunboat Smith and Leach Cross started the New Year with slashing ring victories. At San Francisco Smith crushed the hopes of Arthur Pelkey, claimant to the heavyweight title, in the fifteenth round. At Los Angeles Cross put Bud Anderson out in the seventh round of a battle scheduled to go twenty rounds.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. [illegible] were no knockdowns in the [illegible] Smith-Arthur Pelky fight until the fifteenth round yesterday after[illegible] and then two in succession [illegible] victory to Smith.

The round was still young when Smith, after breaking from a [illegible] let fly a full sweep right for [illegible] jaw. SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A.H.C. Mitchell

FROM tales that [illegible] with the Federal [illegible] [illegible] that the [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] other words [illegible] strain [illegible] the National [illegible] allowing the American League and the Class AA organizations to rest. In addition to the "unpopularity" idea advanced in this [illegible] there [illegible] American Leaguers must remain silent because the part played by them twelve years ago was nearly [illegible] with that in which the Feds are now appearing.

A STATEMENT by Mordecai Brown, the former Cub pitcher, who has been engaged to manage the St. Louis Federal League team, seems to bear out the theory that the Federals are after the National League players. Brown asserts that he will put a bomb under Charles Webb Murphy's team when the right time comes. The three-fingered slab artist and the president of the Chicago Nationals are [illegible] strange bedfellows. Bro[illegible] forgive Murphy [illegible] after the [illegible] [illegible] with Tinker and Kl[illegible]

IT seems to [illegible] that Brown has really [illegible] with the Federal League [illegible] [illegible] former Cub pitcher succeeds in landing several of Murphy's stars this interesting question would arise: How much real effort would [illegible] Comiskey [illegible] to lend [illegible] a helping hand?

FOR years Murphy [illegible] a thorn in the side of [illegible] American League [illegible] pass two or three years ago that the American League adopted solemn resolutions that it would have nothing further to [illegible] the National League [illegible] as a regular bombshell in the National League camp, and the result was that the club owners got after Murphy and forced him to promise to keep [illegible] shut.

MURPHY has been [illegible] tively good toward the American League ever since, but you can't change a tiger's stripes. Certainly Johnson and Comiskey have not learned to [illegible] Murphy.

True Story of Boston's Little Lost Sister Who Found Herself

Curiously enough [illegible] that he was [illegible] one thing [illegible] over a we[illegible] worried [illegible] another [illegible] any part[illegible] or [illegible] and I [illegible] ing a wife [illegible] of course.

I did not know [illegible] evening [illegible] had [illegible] big front [illegible] ing that [illegible] there.

SUSPICIOUS FROM START

The even[illegible] my custom [illegible] to the room [illegible] whom he [illegible] learned after [illegible] the night [illegible] was to stay [illegible] lived in an [illegible] night [illegible] thing that [illegible] was not [illegible] readily [illegible] questions [illegible] perfectly into [illegible] had doubt [illegible] in a week [illegible] into the routine of the [illegible] ing from [illegible] her, I had [illegible] nose into [illegible]

It was a [illegible] ing that [illegible] at the door when [illegible] arrived. [illegible]

This serial is written in the [illegible] of the life story of a coun[illegible] who [illegible] to con[illegible] in Boston [illegible] not [illegible] incident [illegible] has actually happened in Boston within five years. And the conditions portrayed are minimized, rather than exaggerated.

The serial is offered as a picture of the lives of Boston's Little Lost Sisters. It is designed [illegible] hoped [illegible] which the [illegible] given to [illegible] of Bos[illegible] for every [illegible] serial is in the [illegible] of JANET [illegible] of the Little [illegible] found herself [illegible] herself.

'Well Mr. Judkins [illegible] I'm not going to make [illegible] that [illegible] I'm not going to give you up to the police—though [illegible] parole would send you [illegible] All I want is for you to [illegible] and never [illegible] Fanny again.'

He licked his lips nervously. 'Wh[illegible]' I asked [illegible] tell her you're going. Come tomorrow [illegible] hotel tonight.'

He started to protest. Before this, [illegible] I had [illegible] even tone, [illegible] I did not [illegible] that at [illegible] I fired [illegible] and I was [illegible] cried [illegible]

I shook my head slowly. 'No—he never [illegible] divorce [illegible] in Boston anyway.'

'Why [illegible] he did!' she retorted [illegible]

'But he told [illegible] was in jail a year ago [illegible]'

It was [illegible] her face and all her pitiful efforts at self control went flying. She started to contradict me in her first hysterical burst of tears but I handed her the official copy of his sentence.

After that she collapsed completely and for an hour or more I was unable to quiet her. She was overwhelmed by despair [illegible] life for her [illegible] could not believe the world would ever be the same.

Sweet Sixteen and Her Stepmother

By WINIFRED BLACK

YOUR wife is [illegible] kind, gentle, sweet and considerate. And your daughter [illegible] her because she is [illegible] stepmother?

She is [illegible] cross, stubborn, sullen [illegible] ways and you [illegible] Well, now, [illegible] daughter?

[illegible] the saddest [illegible] self-centred age [illegible] sweet sixteen [illegible] silly sixteen. [illegible] that age a girl is a [illegible] girl [illegible] fortunate, a thing to be loved and petted [illegible] that [illegible] twenty or so she's just about the most foolish creature [illegible] world. I'd say the most foolish if she didn't have a [illegible] When [illegible] to be about twen[illegible] read to Foxville [illegible] hard.

It isn't the girl [illegible] cross, it's her age [illegible] she ought to [illegible] stepmothers since she was [illegible] one good word has [illegible] them. She feels about that just [illegible] feel if somebody [illegible] well meaning rattlesnake [illegible] and then was [illegible] to treat bad [illegible] him.

[illegible] of course it is silly—so many [illegible] are, but they are to be reckoned [illegible] the same [illegible] or not.

[illegible] average [illegible] is not as fond of [illegible] as the [illegible] mother—how [illegible] be? But I [illegible] believe she's [illegible] such ogre as popular fiction makes her out to be.

See here! What if you were in business somewhere and you liked the business [illegible] the man [illegible] worked for and [illegible] you and [illegible] you very [illegible] at all. And [illegible] new man to the [illegible] not [illegible] you and from [illegible] half so inter[illegible] your place in the business [illegible] absorbed by the new [illegible] would you love him madly just because somebody told you it was your [illegible] to do so?

Your home, your [illegible], your heart has been [illegible] business for some years. She's been about everything there was on earth to you. And now all at once [illegible] this [illegible] comer taking her place at the table, telling her what to wear. Her—the Great Wonder of the [illegible] she knows [illegible] better than [illegible] of knowing [illegible] was sweet sixteen and he [illegible] too.

[illegible] her about her clothes, "ad[illegible] her about the way to do her hair [illegible] friendships, to [illegible]

[illegible] for Sixteen [illegible] you [illegible] think of it, isn't it?

And then the Mother who's gone—don't you love the little girl just a little for being jealous of the [illegible] for her too?

See things from [illegible] point of view. Now she wouldn't be Sixteen if she could do that, would she?

She'll be [illegible] say forty odd, and a whole lot of things will look different to her when she's forty.

She'll [illegible] poor company and [illegible] tears are an [illegible] wholesome [illegible] she'll see [illegible] of the one she [illegible] the [illegible] and stop a minute [illegible] of a sigh—and nothing more.

[illegible] understand [illegible] that Forty is human as much as Sixteen and need companionship, sympathy, appreciation and love.

Of course she thinks that word [illegible] silly for anything for Forty. But she'll get over that [illegible] some time when she's forty [illegible] And then she'll look back and see how selfish and foolish and cruel she was when she was Sweet Sixteen and tried to still the [illegible] jealousy in her heart by sarcastic smiles at poor Stepmother's little [illegible] attempts to appease her. Then she'll know how selfish she was and [illegible] sorry. But after all, you know this, the very [illegible] when she would have been the very centre of the home if Mother had lived.

Daughter's gowns, daughter's friends, daughter's hopes, daughter's ambitions—those would have been the whole thing and now she's just a side issue, just a second fiddle—and she wouldn't be human if she didn't resent it just a little.

What shall you do? Be patient, be wise, be sympathetic to both these women. They both belong to you, and some day it will all straighten itself out. You cannot eat your cake, dear man, and have it, too, you know. Though, somehow, that's just what we poor mortals are always trying to do, aren't we?

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THERE is sadness up to our little home these days, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Gloom reigns and the sunbeams can't pierce it. We feel just the way them old land owners must have felt after the big wind in Ireland."

"What's the matter?" asked the Head Barber. "Did the old man lose his job?"

"No, nothing like that, said the Manicure Lady. "How often have I got to tell you, George, that father is as independent as a ranch owner? No, it ain't about the old folks. It's about Wilfred. Goodness knows that he has had enough sorrows, real and imagined, in his life, but this is the worst thing which has ever befell him. He has been double-crossed in love, George, by the only girl that he ever really loved, or at least that is what he says about her. The poor boob was getting along swimming with this queen, and in a fit of boyish exuberance he takes his friend, the college professor, up to meet the girl that is shortly to be his bride. He might have known better than to drag a friend around calling on one so dear to him, because history is beaming with cases where the system worked out with the reverse English. You see, George, us girls is never very fickle unless we get the notion put into our heads, and if I was a young gent and was infatuated with a young lady I would see that I got her around to the church before I began introducing my bosom friends to her—and I would go kind of slow even then.

"Well, anyhow, Wilfred brings that smooth professor around to see his pet, and the proof gets talking in that musical voice of his about the glories of ancient Greece, and he recited some verses that a Roman song writer named Mister Horace wrote to some dame, and the beans were spilled. Wilfred tried to recite some of his own poems after the prof was through spieling Horace, but my poor brother was up against too much class, and he was gave the gate, you might say."

"It serves him right," said the Head Barber. "But does he really take it so hard?"

"Does he take it hard?" echoed the Manicure Lady. "Why, George, all this world is sad and gloomy for him now and hereafter. He wrote a poem about how he got the raus, and this is the kind of a wail it was:

"Out of the night,
All black and drear
Your laughter light
My soul does sear.
You loved a boy
More smart, more clever;
My dream of joy
Has went forever."

"He must be in the dumps for fair," said the Head Barber.

"Indeed he is," declared the Manicure Lady. "You ought to see the map on him. His blue tie looks red beside it. The only consolation the rest of us folks has got is that he will nose around until his poet nature falls for some other vision of beauty. Thank goodness, George, the woods is full of them."

Household Hints

To remove the mark of a scorch, wet whatever is scorched with cold water and place it in the sun. When dry, the mark will have disappeared.

When buying apples pick the heaviest; also test the fruit by seeing if, when pressed with thumb, it yields with a slight cracking sound.

If a lamp wick is getting short, sew a piece of flannel to the end of it. This will be found to be as good as a new wick.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES--RESINOL CURED

Atlanta, Ga., April 24, 1913.—"When I received the samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment my face was covered with pimples which defied other creams, soaps and cosmetics. They were a source of constant humiliation to me, coming in contact with many strangers, as I do, as a business woman.

"By the time I had finished a cake of Resinol Soap and half a jar of Resinol Ointment my skin was as soft as velvet, and as smooth. My friends were stunned, and every one asked me what I had done. When I told them, I think they hardly believed it, for the transformation was simply wonderful.

"Since then I have been using Resinol Soap and shall never be without it again, for I have learned the delights of a clear, soft, beautiful complexion that may be attained by its constant use." (Signed) Miss E. P. Gaddis, 284 South Pryor St.

Resinol Ointment (50c, and $1.00) and Resinol Soap (25c) stop itching instantly and speedily heal eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Sold by every druggist. Avoid "substitutes" for Resinol offered by a few unscrupulous dealers. For free trial write to Dept. 36-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Prince Charming

As Betty Dreams He Will Arrive, and as He Does

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

THE day-dreams little girls have! Little girls who have never anything but read and heard of Love. They fancy He will come on the wings of a Dream—out of the mists of the land of Romance—soft-eyed, marvelous in ALL things of the heart and mind, a physical giant, the tongue of a poet and the heart of a Launcelot Du Lake, always in evening clothes with a white bride-rose in his coat, on the wings of a dream. There is moonlight, there is the sea talking, there is the scent of orange blossoms, the sweetest odor in the world, and somewhere in the wide world a violin will be playing—on the wings of a dream and straight into her heart. And his face is a mist of beauty with no special features at all, at all—except that his nose is straight!

But the way he comes! Betty's tall, lanky brother thrusts his face in at door one sunny afternoon and raps out, "Doll up a little tonight, Bet, will you? That little wrap-around-and-fly-out dress with the ice-cream stuff around the neck and the necklace I gave you. I'm goin' to bring Cappie up tonight for a minute. He's no mediaeval hero for looks (oh, he ain't—excuse me—isn't an ogre either), but he's a great chap. You'll like him. About eight o'clock. Good-by!" Well, Betty puts on her little "ice-cream" dress and he comes, and just takes off his hat like any other hero (though romance never tells that). And he drops her little hand in a hurry and it takes quite a little while by the cheer of the hickory logs and the warmth of the listening face she turns to him to make him talk. And the only hint that you ever have that romance is there is the little twinkle in her brother's eyes. And she doesn't care much for his eyes—but his hair is blond and "nice." And—and—and—then he pretty soon goes after he tells her a little bit about his engineering. And her brother demands how does she like him, and she truthfully answers, "Oh, he's nice, awfully nice. I don't like his eyes, and he doesn't talk very much, but maybe I'll like him better after I know him." And the honest little maid never dreams that Prince Charming has come—not on the wings of a dream, but in at the front door—feeling of his tie and glad she is "little." And her brother tumbles in that night muttering, "Gosh, can you beat a girl? She doesn't like his eyes. He talks PLENTY and there's something IN it if she only had any sense. Never mind, Bill, I'll bring him up again."

And one little day Betty stumbles on the fact that her mate is nobody else in the world but this same engineer, and that his eyes are "beautiful!" And somehow, she's perfectly satisfied, she never missed the dream coming out of the sky on rainbow wings. There's enough Romance to keep her bright eyes wide in the silvery morning hours—in just this simple plain reality.

Do You Know That—

The safest railway line in the world ought to be the Illinois Central. No other railway certainly has carried its precautions against accident into such minute detail. A general order has just been issued prohibiting drivers, firemen and conductors, every one, in fact, who is concerned with the actual running of the trains—from carrying on their watch faces pictures of sweethearts, wives or babies. Such pictures, it is explained, are likely to distract the attention of employes from their work.

Some suggestive experiments have been made on German warships with lighted projectiles, which it is thought may take the place of the electric searchlight. The projectile, which is filled with calcium carbide, is fired from a canon, and, since it is lighter than water, after striking it comes to the surface. During its immersion water is automatically admitted and produces acetylene gas, which burns with an illumination equal to that of 3,000 candles.

During the past ten years more than 220,000 persons are said to have been killed in India by snake bites, while tigers, leopards and wolves have accounted for 14,000 deaths.

With plenty of water and without solid food, a horse will live twenty-five days; with solid food and without water, he will only live five days.

The first film play ever shown was forty feet in length. "Quo Vadis?", which required no fewer than 1,500 actors, is on a film 8,000 feet long.

In Chinese cities streets are never built straight, from superstitious fear that processions of evil spirits might otherwise enter and remain.

Tabloid Fables

WHO is the woman, Mother Dear, with that hair on her upper lip and none on her head; the one with the pasty complexion, and the red nose, and who is so fat she waddles?

That, Dear Child, is the famous beauty specialist who has made so much wealth and fame compounding remedies to make women beautiful.

I hear so much, Mother Dear, of perfect housekeeping. What is meant by the words?

It is an expression often misused, Dear One. The perfect housekeeper is one who keeps her floors so highly polished that her friends fall on them and break their legs. No one may claim to be a perfect housekeeper whose friends walk her floors without fear.

Why do we ascribe all wisdom to the ant, Mother Dear? Is it wise to work all day?

We make the ant the emblem of wisdom, Little One, to encourage Others to work. Just between ourselves, Precious, the butterfly is wiser than the ant. It takes no cares, no responsibilities, is admired and sought for its beauty, and some one always provides for it. No one would hurt a butterfly, but every foot is ready to step on the ant.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THERE were many reunions on Christmas Day of old friends; of [illegible] in various stages of [illegible] and [illegible] and of associates who were neither [illegible] dear nor near, but who were called together by the season to discharge an obligation.

Every season has its post and its historian, every [illegible] says she, The Annual [illegible] of the Things One Does Not Want.

That had all [illegible] to Daysey Mayme Appleton's [illegible]. Paper knives, celluloid hair receivers, handkerchief cases, [illegible] ink stands, puzzling combinations of lawn and lace which should have had an explanatory [illegible] all [illegible], breakfast caps and [illegible] and [illegible] all manner of [illegible] and [illegible].

All are [illegible] of the Christmas [illegible] Family [illegible] in too great to prevent this [illegible] commonplace.

It was for the purpose of ascertaining a use for the puzzling combinations of lawn and lace that Daysey Mayme had called her friends together. It would never do [illegible] to wear [illegible] a dust cap something intended to keep the teapot warm, and [illegible] as a head rest on the Morris chair [illegible] article intended as a runner for the dining-room table. Perhaps her friends, having gone through the throes of giving and receiving, might be able to help her solve these Christmas mysteries.

She held up a dinky three-cornered arrangement edged with lace and a pink ribbon bow in the middle.

"What," she asked, "is this?"

One friend said it was for silver spoons, another said it was a knitting bag to hold the yarn when one is knitting, a third declared it was a new style glove, and the fourth settled the problem by proving it was an apron to wear when one is travelling, for the purpose of holding brush, comb, etc., en route to the dressing room.

Another article long and square, with a round hole in the middle, and which Daysey Mayme had thought was meant to wear combing her hair, was declared to be for the sandwiches, and a [illegible] receptacle which she had [illegible] was prompted by the belief of some friend that one [illegible], was voted to be a thimble-holder.

A yard or two of muslin puckered at one end and slashed into scallops at the other had them all guessing and sent two friends home with brainstorms. Some thought it a jelly-bag strainer, others insisted it was a cushion cover, and two girls who had been friends for life ended their friendship forever when one proved it was a music roll.

An article that looked like a cross between a cover for the vacuum cleaner and an opera hood and which bore a faint resemblance to a corset bag provoked such argument that the meeting broke up in a row, and Daysey Mayme, surrounded by beribboned, laced, gathered, ruffled and hemmed articles of every shape and size, the uses of which were unsolved, took herself weeping to bed.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS EDITED BY EXPERTS

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks ranged higher on the first trading day of the new year, opening irregular and dull but making gains on a limited volume of business. There was no breadth to trading in Boston at the opening, but demand for stocks broadened during the morning. Boston & Maine made a large gain, New Haven sold higher and there was an advance for Boston Elevated. Granby was the most active copper issue early in the day.

By afternoon in this market Boston & Maine was up 2 and New Haven ½, while Boston Elevated's rise was 2½. United Fruit was unchanged and American Telephone was off 1½. Shoe common was a point higher.

Gains in New York included Canadian Pacific ½, Southern Pacific ⅝, Union Pacific ½, Reading ⅜, Lehigh Valley ⅝, New Haven ⅜, American Can ¼. American Telephone was off 1½ and Steel ⅛.

NEW YORK OPENED QUIET.

Trading was quiet when the New York market opened, many operators having left town on New Year's eve for the balance of the week. The decline of American Telephone was the only early feature of interest. Pennsylvania's November report was unsatisfactory, but about what had been expected. The action of this issue indicated that decreased earnings had been discounted. Railroad returns for the eleventh month, in fact, were almost all provocative of gloom.

American stocks had been neglected in London, where Canadian Pacific received more support than it has been accorded of late. It made a good gain in New York. There was too much demand for money at all the European capitals to encourage speculation abroad. The Bank of England's weekly report was not a strong showing. Money on call loaned at 4½ per cent. in New York, and by midday the rate was 5½. Time quotations were a little lower. Still easier money was predicted later in the month. Known movements of money for the week ended Wednesday indicate a gain of $9,413,954 in cash by New York banks.

TELEPHONE LIQUIDATION.

The selling of American Telephone was said to be renewed liquidation. There were rumors that Washington developments might be less favorable than had been hoped for. Nobody seemed disposed, however, to connect the New York visit of Attorney-General McReynolds with the affairs of this corporation.

The undertone of the market was firm, although the list was irregular, and during the first hour prices showed an upward tendency. But the range was narrow and business slow. There was more strength and less activity to the market during the last half of the forenoon, when Reading rose more than a point and Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific became conspicuous by advancing. More demand existed for copper stocks, Tennessee touching the highest point it has attained in a long time. Texas Company continued upward. American Tobacco was a rising specialty. It was a professional market, however. One of its features was a limited supply of stock. Bears did not appear confident of bringing out much either, which accounted for their lack of enterprise.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged at 5 per cent. today, and the bank reported that the proportion of reserve to liabilities is now 33.40 per cent., against 43.10 last week, which compares with a decline from 38 to 30⅝ per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

Bay State Street Railway directors have declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $3 per share on the first preferred stock, payable February 2 to stock of record January 17.

The total net revenue of the Boston & Maine decreased $106,947 in November. The decrease in five months, from July 1 to November 30, totalled $991,826.

The total railway operating income of the Pennsylvania road's lines East and West for November decreased $2,001,553.

Erie's operating income decreased $407,263 in November.

For December Boston & Worcester Street Railway Company's gross earnings increased about 1½ per cent., the gross passenger revenue of the Bay State Street Railway Company increased 7 3-5 per cent. and gross earnings of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company increased about 5.21 per cent.

In the London copper warrants market spot was off 12s. 6d. and futures 15s. in the morning, and at the close spot was 7s. 6d. and futures 5s. still lower. Sales were 300 tons of spot and 1,000 of futures. In the last fortnight of 1913 European stocks of copper increased 3,027 tons. Copper exported from the United States in December totalled 30,583.

The Bank of France reports that gold on hand decreased 9,707,000 francs for the week.

St. Paul's net earnings from operations for November decreased $295,356. The decrease in net from July 1 to November 31 was $2,450,193.

THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY OF BOSTON

Boston & Eastern to Ask More Time

The time for filing the $400,000 bond of the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts under the provisions of its charter expired yesterday and the company failed to comply with this requirement.

The road proposes to introduce a bill in the next Legislature for further time in which to file its bond with the State Treasurer.

Extend Hampden Notes for 6 Months

Holders of the $2,000,000 of notes of the Hampden Railroad, which matured yesterday, have agreed to extend them for a period of six months at 6 per cent. interest.

This is thought to remove all possibility of a receivership for the Hampden company and gives more time for the proposed financing of the road by the Boston & Maine.

World Gold Value Drops $11,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The "gold value" of the year 1913 to the world was $455,000,000. The production of the previous year exceeded this total by $11,000,000. This was the first estimate of the director of the mint, George E. Roberts, made in the year 1914.

'DON'T BE BLUE' WANAMAKER'S 1914 MOTTO

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—"There is no room nor reason for a panic. The motto for the new year is 'Don't be blue,'" John Wanamaker told the Union League members.

"The assurances of the President and the Attorney-General as to the future dealings with the corporations operating under the Sherman act have done much toward restoring confidence," said Mr. Wanamaker. "There is not much more room for shrinkages of values. The recent failures are not an index of general trade conditions.

"That a period of greater economy has set in in many directions is clearly manifest, attributable, it is believed, to the income tax, which has reduced the spending money and worked some hardship to hundreds of thousands of people whose living is thereby affected, especially such as are under salaries. The question arises, if industries and active labor are to be taxed, whether it would not be fair to tax the idle and nonproducing classes.

"The man who sees nothing but disaster ahead is not a true American."

His Father Was a City Laborer, and Mr. Kenny Voted as a Member of the City Council to Increase the Pay of the City Laborers

It used to be, and perhaps it still is, a practice among the agents of the corporations and special interests to "put out a rumor" against a public man who was fighting them and against whom they could make no open and truthful attack.

When a man became the victim of one of these mean, cowardly, whispered rumors, it was certain that he had a clean record, as clean as the public record of Thomas J. Kenny, president of the Boston City Council and candidate for Mayor.

A well organized conspiracy has been hatched to blast Mr. Kenny's candidacy by the rumor that he is indifferent to the man in the city employ who has to work with his hands for his daily bread; that he would look after the interests of the large property owners at the expense of the city employes. This story is a barefaced falsehood and those who are putting it out know how meanly false it is.

The AMERICAN assures the people of Boston that there is not even a semblance of truth in this whole yarn.

Mr. Kenny, in language full of dignity and power, himself answered this sneaking slander Monday, at the rallies in South Boston, among his own people who know him; where he was born, where he was reared, where he lived in poverty and where he has remained in the prosperity which his great industry and ability has won for him.

The people of Boston should read Mr. Kenny's words:

> Why, friends, my own father was a city laborer, and I will venture to say that I have more sympathy with the city laborer than Mr. Curley has ever had.
>
> Yet perhaps it is worth remembering just now that this same man who is seeking your votes as Mayor is the same who in a congressional fight addressed you as "Ladies and gentlemen, thugs, doormat robbers, thieves and milk bottle robbers."
>
> My attitude with relation to city employes I know is of interest to you. It has been stated by my opponent that if elected I will discharge the city laborers. He has pictured these men thrown out in the cold with the loss of their bread and butter.
>
> I think I have more sympathy with the city laborer than has my opponent. I favored in the council the pension system for laborers. I stand on record in the council as in favor of increased pay for city laborers. I do not propose to discharge a single city laborer.
>
> Let me make it clear to you that if elected I do not propose to adopt a picayune policy in my relations with city employes. On the contrary it will be my purpose to encourage a system by which men may secure recognition through merit rather than through the use of political influence.
> I am a firm believer that promotions in the service should be the result of a regular and well defined system by which the man in the trench or the man at the drafting board or the clerk, in the event of a vacancy above him, should have the first chance to fill it and should not feel that because of outside influence somebody may be appointed over him.

If the son of a city laborer who has risen to prosperity and influence by his industry, honesty and ability, who has voted to increase the pay of the city laborers and to give them pensions, who has remained among his neighbors in the same district where he was born, when thousands who have prospered have moved away, if such a man may be suspected of unfriendliness to the workingmen, then what kind of a man is likely to be their friend?

Thomas J. Kenny never broke his word. HE IS KNOWN BY EVERY ONE TO BE AN HONEST MAN.

"A prince can make a belted knight,
A marquis, duke and a' that,
But an honest man's aboon his might."

Citizens of Boston, in these days a man who is admitted by everybody, even by his opponents, to be an honest man, is worth more to us than all the alleged "good fellows" in the world. THINK THIS OVER.

Readjust the Seamen's Bill

The statement by Calvin Austin, president of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, that the passage of the La Follette bill will destroy a property worth $10,640,000 is surely worth the consideration of Congress.

It becomes daily more apparent that this bill must be readjusted so that, being fair to both sides, it will have as its chief object the upbuilding of the shipping industry.

On the one hand, though provisions for the absolute safety of passengers may prove expensive and onerous to ship owners, they must not be left out of the bill at any cost. Whatever the expense, if ship owners cannot guarantee to transport their passengers safely, they had better go out of business and let abler and more intelligent men take their places.

On the other hand, the seamen will be shortsighted indeed if they insist on conditions that will decrease instead of increase the number of American ships in the ocean-carrying trade.

What the seamen want is better wages. The first condition necessary to better wages is an increased demand for workmen.

To impose conditions that would restrict the development of our shipping or destroy what little there is left of the American merchant marine would be an act of blind folly that Congress ought not to permit, no matter by whom it is demanded.

There is no possible doubt that the bill can be so altered and amended that it will not only increase the business of ship owners, but enable them to employ more seamen and pay better wages, while throwing every known safeguard about the passengers they carry.

Let the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries hear fully both parties at interest in the bill, and redraft it so that seamen will have no complaint of unfair treatment, and shippers like Mr. Austin will have no ground for fear that their slowly built-up business will be annihilated.

When, Indeed

I'D like an end of every week,
It doesn't matter which,
When I could read just all I like,
Without a halt or hitch.
I'd like to dip in Conan Doyle,
I like his thrilling scenes—
I'd like to re-read Betty Wales
And all the magazines.
I'd like to read the latest book
The New Return of Eve—
And live again the charming life
Of Molly Make Believe.
I know of Shaw and Ibsen now,
And even Maeterlinck.
I've notes on Thomas Mallory
To make a scholar think—
I know of Greene and Peele and Nashe,
I know whole poems of Keats,
I'm fond of Pope and Tennyson,
On Swift I've written sheets.
I'm learning to know Shakespeare, too
And recognize his scenes—
But when shall I have time to read
The monthly magazines?

Gentlemen! We have with us tonight one whom you all know and whose coin you all regard with the deepest interest! Those of us who have not already frisked his pockets hope to do so in the near future! Gentlemen, I refer to that great, that noble, that glorious bonehead, the Common People! The New Year has made a good start! At this solemn moment let us join in the stirring chorus written by the famous Swedish poet, Yim Yones:

To swipe the Common People's dough!'"

Honor All Women as Sisters

By HARRIOT STANTON BLATCH

THE SISTERS, even the Novitiates in Catholic orders, go to and fro in all parts of the world in absolute safety.

However young they are, however isolated, however degraded the surroundings, the ministering nuns are respected.

They command the protection of the men of the world. Why are they thus secure?

Because a great and widespread organization teaches by every means in its reach that men must hold sacred the Sisterhoods of the church. The proper attitude toward these women and their mission is instilled in men in their youth.

Cannot the State, a great and widespread power, instil in its youths a regard as profound for the nation's young womanhood, embodying as it does the profoundest mission of the universe, that mission of giving birth to and mothering the human race?

The most untutored boy, the most degenerate man, would not seek to restrain, much less attack, a woman in church orders. But what is the government of men doing to create a protective spirit toward the future mothers of our nation?

Behind the social evil lies the lack of respect for women, for motherhood. The man who speaks of the love and honor he feels for his mother is using but hollow words if he can remain inactive in sight of the horrors perpetrated upon young girls in order to satisfy mere money-making of commercialised vice.

The man who talks of his attitude of protection toward his young sister is but a hypocrite if he is unwilling to shield the sisters of other men.

Here, to the thoughtful, there is no division between "mine" and "thine"—all girls are OUR sisters, all the future mothers of OUR nation. If we harm the least of them, we harm our country, for such is the law of nature.

The State is the hierarchy for the average man. What lesson does it teach in regard to respect for women, in regard to protection of girlhood? In but ten out of forty-eight States making up our Union have women direct law-making power. In other words, in thirty-eight States, any foreign man coming from the most benighted country of monarchical Europe is given full citizenship and allowed to determine the laws governing the personal rights of the ablest, most devoted woman teacher in the public school system.

This man's attitude toward women often reflects the pernicious lesson of his European training, reinforced by America's upholding of an aristocracy of sex.

Song of a Mexican Bullet

By CHESTER FIRKINS

THEY shipped me down from New York town
To far Chihuahua's border
I stood on bills as "sugar pills,"
And filled a rebel order.
By boat and track, by mule and pack;
At night, on desert dashes,
They rushed me through to Villa's crew
Awaiting cash and clashes.
They thought that they were rid of me,
The Yankees who had set me free;
But that was not Fate's order—
For I came back again one day
Some faster than I went away,
Across the smoking border.
They'd got their pay and felt that they
Had done a kind of duty,
They went back home to froth and foam
For Peace's tutti-frutti
Until again ten thousand men—
Wild cave men armed with clean guns—
Slouched grimly down on Juarez town
To mount "U. S." machine guns.
'Twas then I caught my little chance
To make my lively homeward prance.
El Paso's death recorder
Knows how the "sugar pills" that went
Last month returned last week and sent
Good souls "across the Border."
The dread confines of border lines
Affect a human being
With such an awful sense of law,
He can't tell what he's seeing,
If, in a box, with safety locks,
I'm sneaked across a river,
My bearer blind is like to find
A sabre in his liver.
Ah, 'tis a dreadful crime to TOTE
A bullet to a land remote—
'Tis apt to breed disorder.
But if they SHOOT it back again
And wing a half a dozen men,
That's "O. K." on the border.

Coming! Just What You Will Want to Know All About.

A tremendous surprise in the Russell will case in Sunday's AMERICAN. It's a story that every one interested in the long drawn out controversy over the identity of the real Daniel Blake Russell should read.

And this is only one of many intensely interesting things to appear in New England's greatest Sunday newspaper.

Here are a few of the illustrated features which are of great interest to all readers:

Why Some Women Love Brutes:

Professor E. D. Rice of Columbia University gives a psychologist's reasons why physical power and brute strength appeal to so many women as they did to Mrs. Florence Folsom, whose amazing revelation of her heart's sordid secrets forms the text for Professor Rice's instructive article.

"Unto the Pure All Things Are Pure":

A Parisian woman invites 300 guests to her salon and appears before them entirely undraped in an effort to demonstrate the courage of her convictions that Saint Paul was right when he said that nothing is impure except to those who are themselves defiled.

Why Cards and Parties Make Us Ill:

One of the new and very surprising discoveries about microbes and their habits which science has lately brought to light.

Why Everything Looks So Queer to a Fish:

Ingenious experiments which prove for the first time what strangely distorted images a fish gets of everything it sees.

Evelyn Thaw's Own Story of Her Life:

In this double page installment of her autobiography Mrs. Thaw tells how she fled to Europe in disguise when her baby was about to be born, and explains what prompted her to hide the fact that she was a mother from the Thaw family for two years.

Secret Dungeons of the Tower of London:

The veil of secrecy at last to be torn from the scenes of the darkest tragedies in English history. (Front Color Page.)

Resolved We'll Be Happy:

"Buster Brown's" creator again to the fore. In his inimitable style is given another full page to provide the universe with a laugh.

Why Men Fall in Love with Nurses:

A physician contends, in answer to the recent discussion in various publications, that the mere fact of a man's helplessness and dependence upon his nurse makes him unusually susceptible to falling in love with her.

Should We Eat One Another:

A French physician has surprised the world by advancing the theory that the best food for mankind is man, and that cannibalism supplies the best food.

The Age of Woman's Greatest Capacity for Love

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

THE old, old question is again propounded: When is a woman capable of the deepest affection?

When are her emotions at their ripest?

Woman is always a difficult and complicated subject to analyze, and at the best we can only generalize.

One fact is too obvious to need more than merely stating—the girl under twenty is wholly incapable of forming a lifelong attachment.

If she DOES form one which lasts through all the vicissitudes of maturer years, it is merely a happy chance which has aided her, not the result of her ripened judgment, fine intuition or mature emotions.

One, however, might let this statement cover all attachments—at whatever age—since marriage is so evidently a lottery. An engagement of seven years, where the lovers saw each other almost daily, has been known to end in separation after a year of married misery.

Nevertheless, as a rule, a woman of twenty-five is better able to form a correct idea of a man's character than a girl of eighteen, and she is capable of a deeper love and a more practical expression of it.

So far as the real intensity of a woman's affections are concerned, they are rarely at their strongest before thirty or thirty-five. A woman of that age is to all earlier ages what August is to April, May or June. She craves affection more than she craved it in her adolescence, and she is better able to appreciate and to reciprocate.

This is why so many seemingly happy marriages result in a climax of disaster in middle life. This is why so many women of thirty-five or forty figure in the scandals and divorces of the day.

Men who delight in assuring us that they are our mental superiors in all the sciences and arts, men who have developed their brains and grown great and wise and wonderful in every direction save one, have yet to learn that a wife of middle age—which is the very zenith of life—is no more ready to "settle down" into the dull commonplace of "understood" affection than is the sun at midday ready to set behind the western hills.

Every day we meet bright, intelligent, intellectual men, whose lives are filled with worldly aims and ambitions, and who are supremely unconscious of or indifferent to the fact that their wives are starving for expressed affection.

We have all heard men laughingly refer to sentiment as a thing outlived or submerged in the sea of reality, and use the plural, indicating that they believed the condition was mutual, when we knew at the same time of the heart hunger and restless discontent of the wives who were included in this plural reference.

Thousands of American men today believe they are the most unselfish and devoted of husbands because they are giving brain, mind and body to business with the idea of bestowing luxuries upon their families.

They have no hour for calling, no time for recreation, no evening for social life or entertainments, and no impulse for lover-like attentions to their wives.

They return home tired, nervous, irritable or sleepy, and think the wife unreasonable who complains, since they are giving all their energies for her comfort and pleasure.

Yet her comfort and pleasure would be tenfold if the husband were to escort her about occasionally with the same lover-like attention of his days of wooing and if he were able to talk to her of other things than business and finance.

The middle-aged man may be satiated with his ambitious aims, but it is the middle-aged woman who craves and feels the deepest love.

Fortunately, this is the era of the middle-aged woman; it is her hour of action and achievement.

The last decade has shown a marked progress for the woman of maturity toward a broader, higher plane of usefulness than she has ever before occupied.

Every day new doors are flung open for women whose homes are disappointing and whose hearts are unsatisfied; doors which lead to agreeable occupation, to earnest endeavor and to the happiness which comes from busy days well employed.

And this larger outlook for woman is making her a better comrade for her husband and other men and lessening the chances of her occupying the unenviable position of a neglected wife as the years go by.
